Three On in Ninth, Washington Fails

Ott, With Homer and 3 Singles, Also Hero; Stewart Victim.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 3. The Hubbell hubbub and hullabaloo of the last three weeks unfolded itself this afternoon as an awful truth to Washington. The man is no mere menace. He's a ruthless destroyer of batting power.

With each rise and dip of his talented left arm, Carl Hubbell today raised aloft the banner of the National League over the world series battle ground and the Giants tonight are the proud possessors of a 4-2 victory over the Nats, fashioned by hand of Hubbell, the left hand that dealt death and destruction to Washington's first-game hopes.

Odds Are Shifted.

World series odds shifted tonight as a result of the New York Giants' victory over Washington in the opening game.

The odds on the series, which favored Washington before it began, are now 11 to 10 against the Nats, with the Giants quoted at 7 to 10. The Nats were 7 to 10 before losing today's game.

As far as tomorrow's game goes, however, the American League champions are strong favorites. Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, quoted 4 to 5 against Washington for the second game, with even money the Giants' price for this one contest.

Nats Get Five Hits.

The plaudits of 46,672 ringing in his ears and the fate of the Giants resting squarely on his slender shoulders, the master of the screwball, the three-speed screw-ball that never went into reverse, reduced Washington's batting attack to an almost irreducible minimum, stifled the Nats' big guns, throttled their threats.

Five hits did Washington glean from Hubbell—five singles. Thus was the batting power of the American League's best hitting team condensed by the artisanship of the frail Giant pitching ace, who whipped his screw ball past Washington hitters and recorded 10 strikeouts, a mark that lifts him high in world series annals.

Ott Gets Four Blows.

Side by side with Hubbell tonight stands the perennial schoolboy wonder, Mel Ott, outfielder, as a hero of the Giants. His heroics were devoted to the offense and took the form of four smashing hits, one home run that gave Hubbell a two-run lead in the first inning.

Britain Refuses To Adopt NRA

Chamberlain Hits Labor Party Demands for "New Weapons."

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—A scathing reply to demands that Great Britain adopt United States NRA methods for restoring prosperity was made tonight by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the Exchequer, in a speech at the annual bankers' dinner for Lord Mayor of London.

He ridiculed labor party suggestions that the government attack the depression with "new weapons."

"They call for abandonment of orthodox methods," Chamberlain said, "and require that we adopt in public affairs imaginative finance—although, of course, in private finance it generally goes by a much less agreeable title."

He admitted, however, the first requisite to world recovery was a rise in wholesale prices.

British Labor Hits Gold.

Hasting, England, Oct. 3 (AP). Labor party's opposition to Great Britain's return to the gold standard was registered today in annual conference.

The convention passed a resolution, moved by Commoner Kirkwood, which, besides declaring the party was opposed to any return to the gold standard, called upon the government to organize a national banking system.

"Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England," the Clydesider declared, "is a more effective dictator today than is either Hitler in Germany or Mussolini in Italy."

Steel Chairman's Widow Dies Soon After Mate

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 3 (AP).—Mrs. James A. Campbell, whose husband, chairman emeritus of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., died September 20, followed her husband in death this morning. She was 78 years old.

Opening Game Setting Ideal For Cowbells

Fair Fans, Usually Much in Evidence, Remain Away in Throngs.

By Frank Getty.
(Staff Correspondent.)

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 3 Gotham loves a winner, and Carl Hubbell and his teammates, the New York Giants, sent some 46,672 fans home happy this bright, Indian summer afternoon by beating the Washington Nationals in the opening game of the 1933 world series, 4 to 2.

But the little coterie of capital fans, inconspicuous in the vast, partisan throng which whooped it up in victory beneath Coogans Bluff, left far from disheartened by the outcome, for they had seen the Nats go down fighting gamely, threatening, to the very last put-out to snatch away that victory and spoil New York's big moment.

Late Rallies Fail.

The Washington fans had seen two of those late rallies, for which Joe Cronin and his fellow Nationals have become famous, fall just short of success, and had heard the cheery sound of ringing base hits straightening out the fabled offerings of the mighty Hubbell in the closing innings, exploding the myths created around this "second Mathewson."

Into the teeming maelstrom of right field fans, whence had come only a moment before some comparatively faint but wholehearted rooting for the trailing American League champions, "Goose" Goslin walloped a tremendous drive in the eighth inning, with two teammates streaking around the bases ahead of him. The Nats were only three runs behind, and those three runs seemed for one thrilling, breath-taking moment to have found wings in the "Goose's" prodigious wallop. But the ball fell fouls a few fateful feet, and the rebel yell of triumph died in the throats of the Washington rooters.

Fill Bases in Ninth.

Again in the ninth, the steady clamor of Gotham's victory paen was stilled for a few exciting moments, and the Nat followers exhorted them excitedly as they filled the bases with none out. But this was Carl Hubbell's day, Mel Ott's day, the Giant's day, New York's day—and that's all there was to it. Another rally was checked and soon the exulting National League champions were scampering across the greensward to the club house.

Mollisons to Delay Attempt at Record

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 3 (AP).—Capt. James Mollison announced tonight he and Mrs. Mollison would not attempt another take-off from Wasaga Beach tomorrow on a projected flight to Bagdad, Iraq, in an attempt to set a new long-distance flight record.

He said they hoped to get away later this week.

U. S. Embassy In Cuba Placed Under Guard

21 Slain in Battle Buried in Rising Storm; City Quiet.

Havana, Oct. 3 (AP).—While a special guard of soldiers was placed around the United States Embassy tonight in response to what one of them said were rumors that the structure was to be bombed, 27 victims of yesterday's carnage were buried at Colon Cemetery.

The city was comparatively free from violence, but citizens were prepared for an onslaught from the elements as a tropical storm entered central Cuba. A few rifle shots were heard in the neighborhood of the presidential palace.

Soldiers meantime searched the home of former President Mario G. Menocal with machine guns trained on the house. A soldier said orders had been issued for his arrest, but the captain in charge of the search denied this. He said there had been sniping from the roof of the dwelling. He said the search revealed rifles, a pistol and ammunition, and added that Menocal was in hiding some where.

Check of Officer Dead.

Menocal, who preceded former President Machado in office, returned to Havana after the latter's deposition.

An official check of casualties among officers of the De Cespedes regime, who surrendered in yesterday's battle at the National Hotel, revealed 17 dead, more than 20 wounded, 178 imprisoned at the Principe Fortress and 190 more at Cabana.

It was revealed a Capt. Cossio committed suicide in the National Hotel when one of his fellow officers charged him with cowardice.

Wanted No Intervention.

A spokesman for the 500 officers who were routed from the National Hotel yesterday in fighting throughout the day, charged tonight they were tricked into surrendering when told American Marines were ready to land.

The spokesman declared that when a truce was called shortly after noon they were told that unless they surrendered within an hour after the truce came to an end the Marines would land and intervention would follow.

His companions, he added, wished to save the country from such an American move.

Five Officers Buried.

Five officers were among those buried tonight. Four were student radicals and the rest soldiers. Hearses carried the bodies through wind-whipped streets to the burial grounds. The soldier dead were brought from Camp Colombia, preceded by a band. Infantrymen marched alongside.

It was revealed for the first time today that 30 shots were fired last night at an armored car carrying President Ramon Grau San Martin, in an attempt to assassinate him. A government spokesman was authority for the information.

Persons visiting Cuban fortresses today reported approximately 150 officers imprisoned there. All of them denied rumors that some of their number had been executed either at the fortress or en route.

Adopts Drastic Measures.

President Ramon Grau San Martin meanwhile attempted to bring a semblance of order out of the chaos which reigned yesterday. The executive announced the institution of "drastic measures" to bring order and protect "foreign life and property."

The government in an announcement expressed its regret that an American, (Robert G. Lotspeich), had been killed during the disorders.

"Peace now prevails through the island," the announcement said, "and the movement against the government is definitely crushed."

Tax on Food, Farm Goods Aim in U. S. Relief Plans

Hopkins Believes New Processing Levy to Be Needed.

May Ask Larger Fund of Congress

Head of Corporation Says He Will Seek Wide Powers.

Additional processing taxes on food and farm products probably will be levied to finance the Government's huge relief corporation, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced yesterday.

He also said the relief administration probably would ask Congress for another large fund for emergency relief. Congress has appropriated $800,000,000 for relief in the last two years, $500,000,000 being authorized last May for the relief administration.

Hopkins conferred with agricultural adjustment officials and other administrators yesterday on the setup of the corporation which will take up national surpluses by giving them to the needy. He said he expected the program would last until March at least.

Tells Financing Methods.

Purchasing of surpluses, he said, would be financed through expansion of processing taxes to include goods the corporation needs, plus funds to be taken from Federal relief appropriations. This, with continued Federal matching of State relief money probably will run the relief administration out of funds, making new appropriations necessary. To date, $176,262,863 has been given to States by the relief administration.

Statements that all of the $325,000,000 remaining of the emergency relief fund would be used by the corporation were said by Hopkins to be erroneous. Rather, he said, grants being made to States on the basis of $1 for each $3 expended by them would continue until the fund is exhausted.

Processing and "compensatory" taxes needed for the program will be levied by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. It is the first definite proposal to utilize the processing tax method to finance any governmental program other than crop control. It now is being used by the farm administration to cut down wheat, cotton and tobacco acreage.

Plan to Extend Taxes.

The original bill made seven basic commodities—wheat, cotton, tobacco, milk and products, corn, hogs and rice—subject to processing taxes. It also provided "compensa-

Philippines Delay Independence Vote

Propose to Ask Congress for New Hearing.

Manila, Oct. 3 (AP).—People of the Philippines will have no opportunity to vote in the near future on whether to accept the independence offered them by the Congress of the United States.

The insular senate learned this tonight, when its president, Manuel Quezon, veteran campaigner for "immediate" independence, announced all plans for a plebiscite had been dropped, at least temporarily.

Instead, President Quezon proposed a new mission to Washington to seek clarification of disputed provisions of the independence act, and to ask Congress for a hearing on objections to the measure.

Wets Sweep Virginia 2-1 In Vote Wave

Rural Areas Join Cities With Two-Thirds of Precincts Reported.

Richmond, Oct. 3 (AP).—Returns from 1,061 of the State's 1,690 precincts, including farming areas and cities, indicated tonight that Virginia, second State to ratify the eighteenth amendment, had become the thirty-second to join the repeal parade.

The vote was 81,548 for repeal, to 44,513 against. Advocates of a liquor control plan to replace Statewide prohibition were ahead by about the same margin.

Huge repeal majorities were counted in Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke, Newport News, Lynchburg and the thickly populated area adjacent to Washington.

Counties Join Parade.

Many of the counties were piling up substantial margins against prohibition, State and national.

Early returns showed the dry sentiment centered in the southwestern section of the State, with a number of the counties in that section in the prohibition column.

Richmond complete voted:

For repeal, 11,135; against, 2,706; for State prohibition, 2,753; for liquor control, 11,532.

At Fredericksburg, home city of C. O'Conor Goolrick, repeal leader, election officials listened to music and the world series baseball game while the voting was in progress. Near one of the booths a woman's dry organization held prayer services.

Absent from the State was Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, militant dry leader.

Virginia has long been known as a dry stronghold and was classed by the Wickersham commission as one of the States which made a sincere effort to enforce prohibition.

Winchester for Repeal.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Winchester, in early returns, voted for repeal by a majority of 171 out of 1,000 votes tallied and favored State liquor control by a margin of 208.

Six out of 11 precincts in Clarke County voted 135 for repeal, 38 against; 130 for control, 43 against. Nine of 21 precincts in Frederick County voted 320 for repeal, 241 against; 241 for control, 263 against. Strasburg, Shenandoah County, cast 141 votes for repeal, 92 against; 146 for control, 103 against.

Loudoun Goes Wet.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Twenty-one of 28 precincts in Loudoun County voted 1,136 for repeal, 574 against; 1,040 for State liquor control, 513 against.

Albemarle Wets Lead.

Warren, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—Ten of 21 precincts in Albermarle County today voted 780 for repeal, against 174; for liquor control, 758 to 179.

Warren balloted 350 to 140 for repeal; and 334 to 51 for control.

Bishop James Cannon's Home Town Votes Wet

Blackstone, Va., Oct. 3 (U.P.). Blackstone, home town of Bishop James Cannon, jr., dry crusader, went for repeal by a vote of 200 to 184.

Dillon Tells Bank Gain In Pecora Stock Probe

Capital Structure Jump to $90,000,000 From $5,100,000 Shown.

The Senate Banking Committee delved yesterday into financial mechanics, through which a New York banking house pyramided a $90,000,000 capital structure from an initial investment of $5,100,000.

The story was unfolded by Clarence Dillon, ruddy-faced, low-voiced head of Dillon, Read & Co., under insistent questioning by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel.

It was a story of incorporations, stock flotations, and diversified investments, under which the New York banking firm built its two powerful investment corporations—United States & Foreign Securities Co. and United States and International Securities Co.

How United States & Foreign Securities directors acquired 500,000 shares of common stock in that company for 20 cents a share, that later mounted to $72 on the New York Stock Exchange, was developed by Pecora.

Today he promised to disclose

A. F. of L. Bloc Opens Battle For 3d Party

Group to Rush Issue on Convention Floor as Vital to Victories.

An attempt to remove the American Federation of Labor from the ranks of nonpartisanship and inject it into politics as a powerful labor third party is being made at the Federation convention here.

Leaders expressed belief last night the fight would get nowhere. They declared factors blocking the third part movement were the NRA set-up and the win the depression with Roosevelt attitude of President William Green and others.

The resolution committee considered a resolution urging a third party, but although there was said to be some sentiment for it, the opinion was expressed the committee would reject the proposal.

An unfavorable report, however, will not prevent the resolution from reaching the floor and giving the 545 delegates an opportunity to discuss it.

Tighe Directs Battle.

The commander of the labor party movement is M. F. Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, who can cast 46 votes in the name of his association alone.

Supporters believe such a party is necessary to obtain adequate fruits for labor from the NRA and to rectify code conditions, which are causing Green to demand still shorter hours and higher pay, concerted action at the polls is necessary.

They contend if Green's prediction that the A. F. of L. will grow to 25,000,000 members is realized, a labor party would be irresistible.

A labor party succeeded in England, it was pointed out, and the same idea might succeed here inasmuch as the NRA program assists workers to organize.

The Tighe resolution follows:

Herriot's Illness Declared Critical

Specialists Called as Temperature Rises.

Lyons, France, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Former Premier Edouard Herriot, suffering from uremia, was in a critical condition tonight.

The statesman's temperature mounted above 102 degrees and he was in considerable pain. Three specialists were on the case. An X-ray failed to locate a renal obstruction.

The Radical Socialist party, of which Herriot is leader, meeting at Vichy Thursday, is almost certain to retain him as chief.

Spanish Premier Quits After Vote

Madrid, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Premier Alejandro Lerroux resigned tonight after the Cortes voted nonconfidence in his recently formed ministry.

Lerroux proceeded immediately to the palace to submit his resignation to President Niceto Alcala Zamora.

The resignation left Spain without a ministry for the second time in two weeks. The ministry succeeded that of Manuel Azana. Azana's opposition played a large part in tonight's vote, which was 189 to 91.

Dollfuss Shot Twice; Wounds Not Dangerous

Bullets Fired by Young Nazi Hit Chancellor in Arm and Side.

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, storm-center of disturbed Austrian politics, was shot twice, but only slightly wounded by a Nazi youth today.

The chancellor was injured in the right arm and left side as he was leaving Parliament.

Dollfuss was treated at a nursing home and tonight proceeded with a brief broadcast from his residence, despite the shooting which threw the Austrian capital into turmoil.

The chancellor in his broadcast said a button saved him from more serious injury.

Feels "Fresh and Perky."

"I wish to assure all that, although as if through a miracle I have escaped from this terrible mischief, I now feel fresh, perky and cheery.

"I hope by Thursday it will be possible to return to the chancellory. My injuries are flesh wounds in the right arm and breast and nothing more."

At the chancellory tonight thousands of cheering citizens, including 4,000 members of the Heimwehr, held a demonstration showing their faith and support.

The youth who shot Dollfuss was seized by the police. He identified himself as Rudolph Dertil. He is apparently fanatically devoted to the Nazi cause denounced by Dollfuss.

Denies Intent to Kill.

"I did not intend to kill the chancellor," Dertil told the police, "and hence used a small revolver. Naturally, I was compelled to risk killing him to accomplish my purpose. I am glad I only wounded him."

Dertil said he sought to harm Dollfuss "to attract public attention to the fact he could not protect himself, let alone the nation."

Bullet Stopped by Rib.

Dollfuss displayed complete sangfroid. He ordered himself taken to the Eiselberg Clinic. Commerce Minister Friedrich Stockinger accompanied him.

When the Chancellor's shirt was removed, the bullet which struck his side fell to the floor. It had been stopped by a rib.

Dollfuss had walked to his car and, refusing an ambulance, was taken to the Nursing Home. His wife joined him there and they motored home together.

Dollfuss Felicitated.

Paris, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour telegraphed felicitations to Dollfuss, of Austria, on his escape.

21-Gun Salute Greets President of Panama

President Harmodio Arias of Panama, coming to the United States in an attempt to settle problems affecting this country and his own, will be greeted on his arrival in New York Sunday by a 21-gun salute, it was announced yesterday.

The president will be met by the U. S. Panamian Minister, James G. Dunn, protocol officer acting for President Roosevelt, George Merrill, representing the State Department, and other officials. President Arias, scheduled to arrive in Washington Monday, will be a guest of the White House several days.

Victims Drop as They Seek Escape From Flaming Ring.

List of Injured Estimated at 100

Cigarette Stub Tossed Into Dry Brush Held Cause.

Los Angeles, Oct. 3 (AP).—Thirty-five men were burned to death late to day in the hills above Hollywood where a fire started in under brush, apparently after a worker employed on a municipal project had cast aside a cigaret.

Some 200 unemployed men, sent into a park area to work on relief projects, were trapped in a circle of flames which engulfed a small area between Dam and Mineral canyons, where they were employed.

Hardly any escaped without injury or burns. A fleet of ambulances, fire companies and about 3,500 recruits succeeded in controlling the blaze after it devastated about 1,000 acreas of mountain land.

Various estimates placed the number of injured at between 100 and 150 men and subsequent reports said a score of other workmen had been trapped in an adjoining canyon. Fear was felt for their safety. Fire leaders set up nine first aid stations in the park.

No Chance to Escape.

The workmen, none of whom had been identified, had no opportunity to flee and their danger was increased by a strong wind which spread the flames.

Five of the men brought to hospitals were burned so seriously fear for their survival was expressed. One man suffered a broken back, when he fell down a canyon wall and there were many with broken bones.

An eye witness account of the tragedy was told by W. R. Woods, a county worker, who escaped with several others.

"They didn't scream," Woods said. "They were mercifully suffocated before the fire caught up with them."

Watched Men Drop.

Woods watched the men drop one by one as they attempted to fight their way tarough clouds of smoke.

"We dug and worked to make a fire break, when suddenly the flames were upon us.

"I ran down hill with a few others and got around the flames. When I looked back I saw 40 or more others running up hill. They kept dropping. Then they would crawl a little way and lie still. I never heard a scream. They died silently."

On the hillside where Woods saw his fellow workers burned to death, B. T. Tinker, an automobile driver, said he counted 39 bodies.

Although the largest part of the fire area was considered under control, a small canyon at the north end of the park still was ablaze tonight.

Family Quarrel Blamed for Double Slaying at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.), Leonard Stevens, 23, highway worker, of King George County, last night killed his wife as her mother watched, and then took his own life.

The shooting occurred while the family was at supper. Stevens rushed into the dining room and fired five shots into his wife's body, then turned the pistol upon himself. Mrs. Stevens' parents had forbidden him to come to their home, where the shooting occurred, and that there had been difficulties between Stevens and his wife.

Mrs. Stevens was at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregan, where she had been recuperating from injuries suffered in an automobile accident several weeks ago.

The funeral will be conducted from the J. W. Walker funeral parlor of Comorn tomorrow. Mrs. Stevens will be buried at Weedonsville, while the burial of Stevens will take place in the Potomac Baptist Church Cemetery.

Justice B. Wyatt Walker, Sheriff T. C. Payne, Coroner C. H. Harris and Joseph A. Billingsley, Commonwealth's attorney, are in charge of the case.

Legislator's Son, 15, Kidnaped; Escapes From Three Abductors

Texas Youth Identifies One as Bandit Who Fled Angola Prison.

Texarkana, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP).—J. C. Reed, 15, son of State Representative Jasper N. Reed, of Bowie County, was kidnaped today while on his way to school and three hours later escaped from three men, one of whom he identified as Charley Frazier, accused Texas bank bandit and alleged ringleader in the recent Angola Prison farm break which cost seven lives.

The boy told officers he escaped through the back window of a filling station washroom in new Boston, Tex., while one of the trio kept guard at the door. The abductors, as soon as they discovered the youth had escaped, drove toward Dallas.

Notified Jailer.

Young Reed ran about a mile to the Bowie County jail at New Boston and notified Jailer Bob White, of the abduction.

The youth said a car drew up to the curb in Texarkana and one of the men asked him the way to Foreman, Ark. Before he could reply, a man in the back seat, later identified by him as Walter (Heinie) Henderson, who escaped from the prison farm with Frazier, pulled him into the automobile.

Young Reed asked them why he was being kidnaped, but the only reply he received was:

"We know your father."

Wanted Influence.

Officers here believed the abduction was made in an effort to have the legislator use his influence to obtain Frazier's release on a bank robbery charge at Grapeland, Tex., or as a result of mistaken identity.

The boy was blindfolded and placed in the rear of the sedan, told to keep quiet or "we'll kill you," according to his story.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The New York Herald Tribune says Mrs. James Norman Hill, widow of the eldest son of James Jerome Hill, Western railroad builder, was married at Elkton, Md., today to Herbert Neal, former oil executive.

Nation's First Fan Will See Opener Here

Presence of President Is Expected to Swell Crowd Tomorrow.

President Roosevelt will attend the Giants-Nats game here tomorrow, it was announced yesterday at the White House.

Preparations have been made by club officials and police to accommodate the presidential party. His presence is expected to stimulate the sale of tickets.

Ticket sales have been lagging, club officials announce, in spite of the decision of Judge K. M. Landis to permit sale of single game tickets.

Low Price Tickets Slow.

While the higher price tickets were quickly sold, they said, lower price ticket sale has been slow.

About 1,800 seats at $1.10 will be placed on sale each day of the game, but these are expected to go quickly. Ticket windows at Griffith Stadium are being kept open early and late to accommodate fans.

Inspector T. R. Bean, in charge of the special police detail, has ordered strict enforcement of all parking and traffic regulations.

List of Streets.

On days of the games no parking will be allowed on the following streets from 8 a. m. until the game is over:

Fourth street from Rhode Island avenue to the southside of W street; Fifth street from Rhode Island avenue to the south side of W street; Sixth street from Rhode Island avenue to the south side of W street; Willberger street; Bohrer street; Seventh street from the south side of R street to Florida avenue; Georgia avenue from the south side of Florida avenue to Euclid street; Eighth street from the south side of R street to Barry place; Ninth street from the south side of R street to Barry place; Tenth street from the south side of R street to Barry place; S street from Rhode Island avenue to Tenth street; Rhode Island avenue from R street to Fourth street; French street; S street from Rhode Island avenue to Tenth street; Westminster street; T street from Fourth to Tenth street; U street from Fourth street to Tenth street; Elm street from Fourth street to Fifth street; Oakdale street from Fourth street to Fifth street; Florida avenue from Fourth to Tenth street; V street from Fourth street to Tenth street; W street from Fourth street to Tenth street; Trumbull street; Barry place from Georgia avenue to Tenth street, and Vermont avenue from S street to Florida avenue.

New Taxes Likely To Finance Relief

tory" taxes on competing products. So far, no compensatory taxes have been applied to the large list of competing products.

Hopkins proposes to extend both processing and compensatory taxes over whatever commodities the relief corporation needs for distribution to unemployed.

"We propose use of processing and compensatory taxes in ways and on products not now touched," he said. "The tax will be put on products best able to stand it. What commodities or products it will include will be determined by what goods the corporation needs for relief purposes."

Processing taxes put on wheat, cotton and tobacco in the production curtailment program so far have exerted tendencies to raise prices on these products. It is not altogether improbable, therefore, that application of the tax to the large array of products needed for relief distribution will raise prices on those products.

At the same time, the admitted aim of the corporation program—that of removing surpluses from markets—also would exert price raising tendencies.

Wide Power Sought.

Hopkins seeks wide powers for his corporation. Details of how commodities would be bought have not yet been worked out, he said, he declared bidding seems likely and that both State relief set-ups and "normal manufacturing channels" will be used for distribution.

A wide variety of products will be purchased for distribution to the needy, he indicated. The principal goods will be food, fuel and clothing.

Hopkins yesterday was asked by Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, for $11,000,000 to meet needs in his State next year. The administrator agreed to match funds with Kentucky on a month to month basis.

Buy Milk, U. S. Urged.

Government purchase of all surplus milk for distribution to the needy was urged on President Roosevelt yesterday in a telegram sent by Representative Crosby (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

He claimed milk prices are below costs and that "enormous profits" are made by the "dairy trust" through "dishonest and tricky device of a basic price and surplus quota."

"The producer's basic price now is not enough to pay the cost of milk sold to distributors under the basic price quota, leaving producer with surplus for which he must take an even lower price," Crosby's telegram said. "Lifting the surplus restriction will restore fair prices to producers and break the strangle holds of the Nationa' dairy trust on the country's milk industry."

Oil Tanks Are Upset In Ecuador Earthquake

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Oct. 3 (AP).—Earth shocks felt first at 5:14 a. m. today, and followed at intervals throughout the morning by shocks of lesser intensity threw the populace into confusion and did minor damage to small dwellings.

In the oil region of Santa Elena, violent shocks upset many oil tanks. Some houses fell at Manglaralto.

Dillon Testifies About Stock Deals

how much of that 20-cent stock was sold in the open market by individual directors for $56 a share.

Self-possessed, Dillon responded willingly to most of the counsel's questions, occasionally remonstrating that Pecora's "step-by-step" method of interrogation was not getting "the complete picture" before the committee.

Each time Pecora laughingly declined to alter his approach.

"I do not ask to see the distant sea," he continued, "one step . . . . enough for me."

Starting with Dillon, Read & Co.'s incorporation eight years ago of its first investment trust, United State & Foreign Securities Co, Pecora drew out how that $30,000,000 corporation, controlled by Dillon, Read & Co.'s original $5,100,000 investment, later organized the $60,000,000 United State & International Securities Co.

$1,000,000 for Marketing.

In the first venture, 250,000 shares of first preferred, 6 per cent, no-par-value and nonvoting stock was sold to the public for $25,000,000, with a $1,000,000 cost for marketing. In adition, a second preferred stock flotation of 50,000 shares was retained by the company at a cost of $5,000,000.

The company then issued 1,000,000 shares of comon stock, allotted one share each to preferred stock holders, and assigned the remaining 500,000 shares to individual directors on payment of $100,000 additional, it was testified.

These 500,000 shares, acquired by directors at 20 cents a share, are now quoted on the market around $11, Pecora charged. Through this common stock, the company gained three-quarters control of the $30,000,000 corporation, he said.

Wickersham Profited.

Here the committee investigator deviated to point out that George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General, head of the Hoover crime commission, and one of the directors of the investment trust, bought 100 shares of the second preferred issue for $100 each. With this, he was allotted 500 shares of the common stock.

Wickersham was one of six directors of the company purchasing a total of 2,600 shares of the second preferred issue, Pecora said. Others purchasing 500 shares each, and receiving 2,500 shares of common, were H. F. Fleishacker, San Francisco banker; R. Schaffner, Chicago banker; F. H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; John Sherwin, Cleveland banker; and A. W. Burchard, of General Electric Co.

"Dummy" Transfer Cited.

How stock control passed to Dillon, Read & Co. through an intermediary, J. Perry Olcott, identified by Dillon as a bookkeeper in the New York banking house, was brought out by Pecora, who charged that Olcott was a "dummy" for engineering the transaction.

"I don't know what you mean by 'dummy,'" the witness replied. "All of that was left to the lawyers, and it could have been done without Olcott. He served only as the legal mechanism for accomplishing our purpose."

The committee at its afternoon session turned its inquiry quickly to formation of the second investment trust organized five years ago, the United States & International Securities Co.

Control Without Cost.

The first preferred stockholders were allotted one share of common stock for each share of preferred, and the company was assigned 2,000,000 shares of common, Pecora charged. Through this means, he said, Dillon, Read & Co. acquired four-fifths control of the new trust, without investing another dollar in addition to the $5,100,000 it had originally put with the United States & Foreign Securities Co.

Quizzed on Advertising.

Pecora developed that Dillon, Read & Co. did not announce in advertisements of the first trust company's $25,000,000 preferred stock flotation that $1,000,000 was to go to the company and dealers for "selling expenses" at a 4 per cent commission charge.

Pointing out that the securities act enacted last session requires this information, he asked Dillon if he approved of principles behind the securities act.

"I am in hearty sympathy with any movement to give more information to the investing public," Dillon replied.

160,000 Join Legion's Great Chicago March

Martial Music Blares From 350 Bands in Colorful Parade.

Soldiers Field, Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP), Blare of martial music, 350 bands, sun glinting on dress regalia, 160,000 pairs of feet tramping.

The American Legion went on parade today, just as it has marched once a year since the war, only in greater numbers.

Men who laid aside their arms years ago and returned home to take up peaceful pursuits were in the ranks. They marched today and liked it, on legs grown a trifle less agile since they went through France.

Legion officials termed it the greatest parade the organization has held. It began on Chicago's near North Side, and proceeded down Michigan boulevard. The city paused to watch it. Schools and civic offices were closed.

Some From Foreign Lands.

Legionnaires from all parts of the United States and from foreign lands participated. The procession was a gigantic stream of multi-colored segments. There were khaki uniforms, red uniforms, blue ones and strange garbs of other countries.

In the cloudless sky, a fleet of Army airplanes droned through orderly maneuvers. Along the line of march, a half million milled. Every window that commanded a good view of the parade framed a group of faces.

The legionaires tramped a mile along Michigan boulevard and two more in Grant Park to Soldier Field Stadium, past the reviewing stand and back across the park to the Loop, where they dispersed.

Interspersing the pomp and panoply of warriors were comic floats.

The Nome, (Alaska) Department was preceded by an Eskimo woman leading a husky dog. Automobiles converted into copies of the locomotives which carried the soldiers in France were in the parade, bells ringing, whistles blowing.

Police Lead Parade.

First to pass the reviewing stand was a detachment of motorcycle and mounted police, followed by the honorary grand marshal, Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth Corps Area.

Then came units of the Regular Army and Navy, marching to the strains of the Chicago Board of Trade Band, champion musical aggregation of the legion.

National Commander Louis A. Johnson marched next in line, accompanied by past commanders.

Legionnaires from foreign lands followed. Represented were Puerto Rico, Italy, Alaska, Panama, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, Mexico and France.

Iowa Governor Sings.

Gov. Clyde Herring joined the boys from Iowa and lent his voice to the chorus of the State song.

In the reviewing stand were Col. Russell C. Martin, of Los Angeles, national commander of the G. A. R.; Gen. Harry R. Lee, of Tennessee, chief of staff of the Sons of the Confederacy; Mrs. S. A. Blackburn, national president of the Legion Auxiliary; Henry D. Lindsley, past national commander of the legion; Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heinck, opera diva, and Gen. Nicolo Sansannelli, of Italy, who invited the legion to hold its 1937 convention in Rome.

Also in the stand were Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago; Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian Consul General; most of the seven candidates for national commander of the legion, Commander Johnson, Gen. Adelbert de Chambrun, representing the French government; Col. L. R. LaFleche, Canadian minister of defense, and high military and naval officials.

Woodring Marches.

Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring marched with the group from Kansas, of which State he formerly was governor. Woodring stopped at the reviewing stand and watched the drum corps and bands from his home State march by.

National Commander Johnson cheered lustily when his State's representatives marched by.

The James Reese Europe Post, of Washington, D. C., presented a colored band in deep purple attire.

Johnson Plans Speed Today In Reorganizing NRA Staff

Administration of Codes Will Be Placed Under 4 Group Leaders.

Return of Administrator Hugh S. Johnson was awaited by the NRA today, with a fast start on the second stage of its career in the offing.

For semipermanent administration of codified industry, the administrator is expected to reorganize the NRA staff into four distinct groups, which in turn may supervise activities of major groups of related trades designated as industries. This grouping virtually is ready for action and awaits President Roosevelt's approval.

The administrator went to New York to lay before the President tentative plans which may relieve the NRA at least partly from responsibility of enforcing manufacturers' codes.

Self-regulation for industries under codes already established is said to be Gen. Johnson's goal.

Will Act Quickly.

The general, it is understood, still is reluctant to cut trade associations sharply adrift from NRA supervision, considering them not strong enough as yet to maintain themselves as now organized. He will move quickly to settle hundreds of codes pending.

Another problem which will confront Johnson on his return is that of dealing with certain manufacturers charged with profiteering. Each of these cases is being gone over minutely by investigators under Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside. At hearings offenders will get every opportunity to correct their methods.

National Authority Asked.

A demand for a "national code authority" to maintain supervision of the automobile parts and equipment code developed yesterday at the insistenee of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who urged the NRA to eliminate superfluous "modification of the collective bargaining provisions of the act."

The automobile parts industry asked a maximum work week of 40 hours, averaged over six months' time, with a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour for men and 35 for women. Green demanded a 30-hour week and 55 cents an hour as a minimum for employes engaged in processing products.

For the first time, the NRA rejected a code because it was not considered representative of the industry. It was proposed by the motion picture and theater supplies and equipment industry.

The code was turned back because the NRA was unable to determine it represented more than 58 per cent of the industry, while the National Recovery Act requires at least 70 per cent to support a code before giving it official approval.

First Lady of the Land—for a Day

Underwood & Underwood.

SARA DELANO ROOSEVELT.

President's Grandchild Is First Baby to Rule White House.

Reign Ends With Return of Mrs. Roosevelt Tomorrow.

Only two years of age, Sara Delano Roosevelt is now Mistress of the White House—first little lady of the land.

All alone in the great mansion, only member of the official family in town, the granddaughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will reign supreme until tomorrow.

The President's son, James, and his wife, parents of Sara, are on the high seas, Europe bound.

In the absence of all the grown-ups, the child enjoys an experience hitherto unknown.

Officially, the entire White House staff is at the beck and call of a 2-year-old. But Sara is too busy playing with her dolls to issue orders.

Her reign will end tomorrow, upon the return of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Loans on Farm Mortgages Top Million Daily

Applications Now on File Total $800,000,000; New Ones Pour.

(Associated Press.)

In step with President Roosevelt's endeavor to expand credit, the Farm Credit Administration reported yesterday that it is issuing farm mortgage loans at the rate of $1,000,000 a day and that even this high peak will be exceeded in another month.

Gov. Henry Morgenthau, jr., of the administration, said greater speed will be necessary to catch up with requests for $800,000,000 in loans—a record amount in applications—already on file with the 12 Federal land banks and new ones pouring in daily.

Land bank staffs have been doubled in some instances and will be tripled at some of the bank centers to keep up with the demand for the Government's offer of mortgage loans at interest rates as low as 4½ per cent.

Increases in appraisers is the main goal, with more than 2,100 now on the job. Morgenthau is seeking to cut down time required for loans.

Elbert S. Goss, land bank commissioner, said that in September the land banks completed 4,390 loans for $14,021,775.

In November he expects the land banks to make loans well in excess of $25,000,000, while he expects $50,000,000 or more in December.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 3 (AP).—Congressman Martin L. Sweeney, insurgent Democrat, tonight conceded the nominations of his rival Mayor Ray T. Miller, Democrat, and Harry L. Davis, Republican former mayor, in today's nonpartisan mayoralty primary.

Mayor Miller issued a statement asserting "the vote was a victory for good government."

Crooner Indicted For Hotel Killing

New Orleans, Oct. 3 (AP).—A grand jury, which heard only three witnesses, today returned an indictment of first degree murder against Louis Kennetu Neu, 26, former sailor and cabaret crooner, for the hotel slaying of Shemield Clark, sr., Nashville, Tenn., business man.

Neu, whose home is in Savannah, Ga., was arrested in Jersey City, where he confessed he robbed and slugged Clark to death in a hotel here a week after he similarly had slain Lawrence Snead, Paterson, N. J., theater manager.

Mrs. Greenway Leads Arizona Congress Race

Opponents Trailing as Nearly Half of State Precincts Report.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Isabella Greenway, friend of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, was leading by a wide margin tonight in the Arizona special congressional election, with the vote 20 per cent counted. She is a candidate to succeed Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas.

Dillworth Sumpter, Socialist, although trailing Mrs. Greenway, 3 ot 1, was ahead of H. B. Wilkinson, 2½ to 1.

Of the State's 451 precincts, 101 gave: Greenway, 6,885; Sumpter, 3,322; Wilkinson, 910.

Only a 25 to 30 per cent vote was indicated. Many voters eschewed the polls to watch world series scoreboards.

Mrs. Greenway is a recognized leader of the Democratic party in Arizona. She was a school chum of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a bridesmaid at her wedding.

Two Grilled in Probe Of Girl's Mystery Death

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—South side police headquarters tonight said the body of a girl found in a swamp on the south side of the city a few days ago has been identified as Clara Rowe, 17, Hammond, Ind.

Police said they were questioning Allen Gatewood, 29, Hammond, and Dr. Morris Reich, Chicago.

Solicitor Hits Shepard Plea

Court Asked to Dismiss Appeal on Conviction in Wife Slaying.

Dismissal of Maj. Charles A. Shepard's appeal from conviction of murdering his wife in Kansas City, Kan., was sought yesterday in United States Supreme Court.

Oral arguments were set for October 9, after Solicitor General Biggs filed a brief, answering exceptions by defense counsel. The Government insisted testimony by a nurse that Mrs. Shepard said, "Dr. Shepard has poisoned me," was properly admitted.

Biggs argued the trial court was correct in permitting testimony by Sergt. Gresser that Mrs. Shepard said she believed she was being poisoned.

The solicitor general declared the trial court properly excused members of the jury panel who admitted reading a newspaper article by the defendant.

Shepard was tried more than a year ago.

World Crisis Tests Morals, Says Einstein

Calls on Western Nations of Europe to Defend Individual Liberty.

London, Oct. 3 (AP).—Necessity of preserving individual liberty if a life worth living is to be maintained was urged tonight by Prof. Albert Einstein in an address at Albert Hall, which was guarded by police as the result of rumors of trouble.

The hall was packed for the noted physicist's address on science and civilization. A large number of Jews were in the audience, including Lord Reading.

Einstein came to England from Belgium after a Nazi organization was alleged to have put a price on his head.

Hope in Western Nations.

"It is in times of economic distress such as we experience everywhere today," said Einstein, "that one sees clearly the strength of the moral forces that live in a people.

"Let us hope the historian, delivering judgment in some future period when Europe is politically and economically united, will be able to say that in our day the liberty and honor of this continent were saved by its Western nations, which stood fast in the hard times against the temptations of hatred and oppression, and western Europe defended successfully the liberty of the individual which has brought us every advance of knowledge and invention — the liberty without which life to the self-respecting man is not worth living.

Asking how one could save Europe from a new disaster, the speaker continued:

"If we want to resist the powers which threaten to suppress intellectual and individual freedom, we must keep clearly before us what is at stake and what we owe to that freedom which our ancestors won for us after hard struggles. It is only the men who are free who create the inventions and intellectual works which to us moderns make life worth living.

Fight Slavery.

"Without doubt, the present economic difficulties eventually will bring us to the point where the balance between the supply and demand of labor and between production and consumption will be enforced by law.

"But even this problem we shall solve as free men, and we shall not allow ourselves to be driven into a slavery which ultimately would bring with it the stagnation of every healthy development."

The white-haired professor received a rousing reception when he was introduced to the meeting by Lord Rutherford.

Lord Rutherford explained the object of the meeting was an appeal on behalf of the refugee academic and professional workers.

Sim James Jeans, the scientist, said the problem was too vast for any one country or nationality to undertake by itself.

Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, Einstein's host, declared the Jews had contributed the most to Germany's position, and Germany had expelled her most civilized citizens.

Lived in Solitude.

"I have lived in solitude in the country and have noticed how the monotony of the quiet life stimulates the creative mind," Einstein said. "There are certain callings in our modern organization which entail an isolated life without making a great claim on bodily and intellectual effort. I think of such occupations as the services in the lighthouses and lightships.

"Would it not be possible to fill such places with the young people who wish to think out scientific problems, especially of a mathematical nature? A very few of such people have the opportunity during the most productive periods of their lives to devote themselves undisturbed for any length of time to scientific problems.

"Shall we worry over the fact that we are living in a time of danger and want?" he asked. "I think not. Man, like every other animal, is by nature indolent. If nothing spurs him on, then he will hardly think and will behave like an automaton."

"In the lightning flashes of our tempestuous times, one sees human beings and things in their nakedness. Every action and every human being reveal clearly their aims, powers and weaknesses and also their passions."

British Arrive For Debt Talk

Sir Frederick Ross May Urge Acceptance of 10 Per Cent.

(Associated Press.)

Bearing what officials expect to be a lump-sum offer for settlement of the British war debt, representatives of the British government arrived last night.

While Sir Frederick Leith Ross, chief spokesman for the British treasury, remained in New York, his associate, T. K. Bewley, declined to discuss the matter. Rumor has placed the expected offer at about 10 per cent of the principal, or, roughly, $300,000,000.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, Ambassador to the United States, said he would like to have it emphasized that the debt represented only actual war expenditures by the British.

For the United States, the spokesmen will be Undersecretary Acheson of the Treasury and Dr. Frederick Livesey, Assistant Economic Advisor to the State Department.

Acheson plans a conference with President Roosevelt late in the week.

Work on Gompers Statue Delayed

Statue of Samuel Gompers being hoisted into place on Massachusetts avenue near Tenth street northwest. Shortly after this picture was taken, work on the memorial ceased because of a dispute between iron workers and the General Bronze Corporation.

Labor Fights About Statue Of Gompers

Battle Over 4-Hour Day May Block Erection of Figure.

A huge Samuel Gompers, cast in bronze and weighing many tons, sat dejectedly in the triangle at Tenth street and Massachusetts avenue last night, labor troubles breaking around his head.

The grim old fighter, sculptured in a sitting position, reposed on wooden flooring near the platform where President Roosevelt is expected to dedicate the memorial Saturday.

But it will take extraordinary measures to have the statue placed and assembled by that time. Organized labor's tribute to its renowned champion is jeopardized by the unwillingness of a contractor to accept a four-hour day and double shift for ironworkers.

Yesterday the ironworkers went on the job at 7:30 a. m., quitting at 11:30. General Bronze Corporation, determined against the four-hour day, refused to put on a second shift. Work was suspended and there are no plans for its being resumed today, unless the men agree to work through until 4 p. m.

"We're going through with this even if we have to do it without pay," said Leslie L. Myers, the ironworkers business agent. "We won't let anything stand in the way of this tribute to the man who did so much for trade unions."

He accused the Bronze company of forcing a lockout.

The granite to be used in the memorial has not arrived and stained wood will be used as a temporary substitute.

More than $100,000 was contributed for the memorial by thousands of unionists.

Act Held Blow To Mortgages

Realty Groups, in Pleas for Change, See Home Financing Blocked.

Home financing recovery will be retarded greatly unless mortgage regulations under the securities act are simplified, representatives of the National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday told the Federal Trade Commission at a hearing.

Mortgage making and mortgage sales are being clogged by existing regulations, they said. Added expense to home owners and borrowers might be removed by revision, they added.

The Washington Real Estate Board was represented by a group of members.

Others who took part included Gen. Nathan William MacChesney, Chicago, counsel for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and Huston Thompson, former member of the Federal Trade Commission, who represented the District of Columbia.

Jardine Becomes Kansas Official

Impeachments in Forgery Case Considered.

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 3 (AP).—While a special legislative committee sought to determine if impeachment proceedings were warranted against the State attorney general and the State auditor, William M. Jardine, former United States Minister to Egypt, who came here from Washington, was sworn into office as State treasurer today.

These were the latest developments in Kansas' municipal bond forgery scandal. Tom B. Boyd, who resigned as State treasurer October 1, Ronald Finney, Emporia bond broker, and Leland Caldwell, his assistant, are under arrest on charges growing out of State and Federal investigation of the bond forgeries.

2 Men and Woman Face Murder Trial

Crossville, Tenn., Oct. 3 (AP).—W. H. Wilder, 52, a Tennesseean, and William Burgess, 30, of Castle Ford, Idaho, will go on trial here Thursday on charges of slaying James Copeland, 19, of Canton, Ohio, in a mountain community near here five years ago.

Wilder's wife, Mrs. Lavada Wilder, indicted on charges of aiding and abetting in the killing, will also be tried.

$133,150 Set As Davis 'Take' In Lodge Case

Accountant Gives Moose Financial Records at Trial.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Checks and account books indicating that Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, received $133,150, directly or indirectly, from an alleged lottery conducted by the Loyal Order of Moose in 1930 were put in evidence today as the Government neared the end of its case.

Senator Davis, Moose director general, is on trial with Theodore G. Miller, also a Moose officer, on charges of causing the interstate shipment of lottery tickets.

Assistant United States Attorney Louis Mead Treadwell said the Government would rest its case tomorrow. Whether Senator Davis would testify in his own defense was not disclosed.

$1,067,728 Receipts.

Records identified by Jacob Heffler, accountant employed by the Department of Justice, indicated the propagation department of the Moose, headed by Miller, received $1,067,728 from the sale of tickets. Local lodges retained an additional $533,864.

Expenses of charity balls for which the alleged lottery tickets were sold were computed by Heffler at $617,728. Profits amounted to $450,000, he said.

The books and checks tended to show that $100,000 was turned over to the organization department, headed by Davis; that $15,300 went to the senator's personal bank account, and $17,850 to the Liberty Bond and Mortgage Co., of Pittsburgh, which the Government contends was owned by Davis.

$150,000 to McGuire.

Miller was shown to have received $16,849.

Bernard C. McGuire, who has pleaded guilty, was recorded as having received $150,000 for promoting the balls, and $150,000 was recorded as having gone to the Moosehart home for children.

Heffler is expected to testify tomorrow about the distribution of money in 1931, the year on which the indictment against Davis and Miller is based.

Miners Spurn Union Leaders' Peace Request

Insurgent Coal Strikers Reject Efforts to Open Pits.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 3, (AP).—Refusal of Fayette County's insurgent coal miners to end a three-week's strike tonight frustrated efforts of NRA officials and union leaders for a unified back-to-the-mines movement.

More than 20,000 of the 75,000 returned to the pits in the district east of Pittsburgh but those in the extreme west remained out.

A crowd of 10,000 or 15,000 of the insurgents booed down attempts of union leaders and a plea of Gov. Pinchot to end the walkout, shouting "not a man goes back until the H. C. Frick Coke Co. recognizes the union."

Nevertheless, officials of the United Mine Workers of America hurried couriers to every mine superintendent of the area ordering members to return tomorrow morning.

Anthony Calvacante, Uniontown attorney, read a telegram from Pinchot saying Frick had agreed to wages and hours of the code, to "check off" union dues of the men and grant them a check weighman of their own selection.

Attempts of the coal miners to bring out workers of the U. S. Steel Subsidiary, Carnegie Steel, at Clairton, virtually ceased today, and the plants operated normally.

Wheat Price Advance Seen

Forecast Based on Crop Found Smaller and London Meeting.

Some advance in world wheat prices from recent low levels was predicted by the Agricultural Department's bureau of economics yesterday.

The forecast was based on the "smaller world crop for the current season and the constructive nature of the London wheat conference." Materially higher prices in the United States than in world markets will continue, it said.

Governmental aid in removing pressure of the export surplus from Pacific Coast markets was mentioned as a factor favorable to the domestic market.

The wheat crop in European importing countries this year is only slightly larger than last, despite large yields.

"Prospects that the European and non-European importing countries will absorb all the quotas, totaling 462,000,000 bushels, allotted the four principal countries at the London Wheat Conference," are in sight, the report said.

No large Russian wheat exports are expected.

Troop Landing On Cuban Soil Held Remote

Policy of U. S. Unchanged as Reports of Quiet Reach Capital.

Quieter conditions in Cuba were reported to the State Department yesterday, but officials who have watched the fires of trouble smoulder and flare many times in recent weeks frankly said they did not know what to expect.

The administration stood firm in its policy of no armed intervention now.

Secretary Hull was careful to avoid any word which might be misconstrued and interfere with efforts of the cooler heads in Havana to work out a solution of the island's problems.

Landing Extremely Remote.

The Secretary of State said the American attitude was unchanged and informed quarters said the possibility of landing troop or marines from American warships was extremely remote.

It was clearly indicated there was no likelihood that the killing of an American in Havana yesterday would become subject of an official protest. The department noted President Ramon Grau San Martin's expression of regret at the incident.

Opinion at the State Department was that the situation was no more promising than at any time since the De Cespedes government was overturned by a bloodless coup of the army.

Two Important Factors.

Still standing out as the most important factor in the problem was this well armed and organized military force whose course of action was difficult to predict.

Another complicating factor appeared to be labor unrest and communistic feeling.

514 Marines From Quantico Havana Bound

Preparations Completed for Entire Regiment of 1,200 to Follow.

Quantico, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—A battalion of 517 marines shoved off from Quantico tonight to board the battleship Wyoming at Hampton Roads tomorrow morning for a training cruise which may take them close to Cuban waters.

Lieut. Col. H. A. Potts, a native of Virginia with 30 years service in the Marine Corps, was in command.

A regimental band on the docks played "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," an American marching song of Cuban war days, as the leathernecks embarked with their equipment on the regular Washington-Norfolk night boat for Hampton Roads.

See You in Cuba.

"See you in Cuba!" members of the first battalion, left behind at Quantico, shouted as the transport pulled out.

Although they described the movement as a "regular practice cruise," Naval officers said it was possible the Wyoming might relieve the battleship New Mexico off Florida.

The executive officer of the battalion was Maj. Clifton B. Cates, of Tennessee. A medical detachment of eight men was under the command of Lieut. Comdr. George P. Dowling, of Washington.

Photographs Barred.

Under orders from Washington, no photographers were allowed on the dock as the Marine contingent boarded the ship for Hampton Roads.

The departure was reminiscent of war days. More than 500 persons, many of them wives and children of officers and men, stood on the wharf, waiting for the detachment to march down and board the boat, while the regimental band played "From the Halls of Montezuma," and other songs, many of World War days.

Before they went abroad the Leathernecks were drawn up in formation for a moment while Brig. Gen. Harry Lee, commander of the station at Quantico, spoke on what he called embarkation upon a "Practice Cruise."

Col. Potts, commander of the outfit, had been a major until Monday afternoon, when he was promoted to lieutenant colonel. He sailed with a shiny new silver leaf on his shirt collar. Col. Potts served in the army of Cuban pacification in 1908 and 1909 and is a veteran of service all over the world. He was on the brigade staff of Gen. Smedley Butler in China in 1927-1929.

Maj. Cates, executive officer of the battalion, is entitled to wear 15 medals, among them the Croix de Guerre, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Honor decoration and the Navy Medal. He served with the Sixth Marines during the World War and has seen service in the Tropics.

6,000 At Post's Electric Board See Game Lost

Hopeful Throng Finally Gives Way to Gloom After Brief Cheers.

Six thousand fans saw the first game of the world series yesterday, through the medium of The Post's scoreboard, and "saw" the Nats succumb to the clever southpaw hurling of Carl Hubbell. There were spasmodic outbursts of cheers and applause, but for the most part a tense silence, born of the hope that the tide of battle suddenly would turn and give the Nats the advantage.

Longe before 1:30 o'clock, official starting time, clusters of fans began to take up their posts along the Avenue and on the sidewalk directly under the board. When the broadcast from the Polo Grounds began, the sidewalk and street directly in front of the board was jammed, and the squad of bluecoats on duty had difficulty opening up lanes of traffic.

Hopeful expressions were discernible on the fans' faces when the game got under way, even after Mel Ott poled one into the left field stands with Joe Moore on base. These same Nat supporters had stood before the board during the league season and seen their favorites twin out in the closing innings, after getting off to a poor start.

Enthusiasm rose and waned accordingly as Washington men got on base. There were spasmodic outbursts of cheering as Cronin and Schulte came through with hits, and groans when Buddy Myer committed an error. But in the ninth their hopes soared and joy was unrestrained as Washington filled the bases with only one out. Even after Bluege fanned for the third time, there was hope. But as Hubbell bore down on Sewell, the enthusiasm subsided, and it was a gloomy throng that saw the final strike go over the plate, ending Washington's hopes for victory.

Van Voorhees' Count Many Branches at Reunion.

It seems that McKee isn't the only name that can be spelled 100 different ways. The Van Voorhees Society met at the Mayflower Hotel last night and the members found that they could spell their name anywhere from Van Voorheesen to just plain Voris.

Only yesterday the society found another spelling. It belongs to Robert A. Voorus of the Congressional Library.

The society, part of a national organization, is planning to observe in 1935 the 275th anniversary of the arrival in New Amsterdam of the original member of the family in America, Steven Coerte Van Voorhees.

A. F. L. Bloc Plans Third Party Fight

years labor's fight to organize has shifted from the factory to the courts; and

"Whereas, social legislation is becoming more and more necessary to the workers in the United States; and

Whereas, neither the Republican nor the Democratic parties can be counted upon to further the aims or to advance the conditions of labor; be it

"Resolved, That the fifty-third annual convention of the American Federation of Labor go on record as favoring the formation of an independent labor party, and that it abandon the traditional nonpartisan political policy and sponsor a genuine labor party."

Meanwhile, other difficulties were in store, but President Green's old guard insisted they had the votes, both in the resolutions committee and on the convention floor, to defeat them.

Insurgents Hold Parley.

One of the difficulties was developing during the night with a meeting being conducted by radical labor contingents at Carpenter's Hall, Tenth and K streets northwest.

A showdown was promised by Louis Weinstock, organizer of the insurgents, who asserted his followers would attend the convention in the Willard today. He declared Green had failed to push sufficiently for enactment of unemployment insurance by Congress, and declared federation officials should retire from advisory positions with NRA.

Both Green and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who so far has given his support to Green's reelection, were characterized by Weinstock as having "accepted the now discredited merit clause in the outomobile code as well as the provision in the coal code that denies workers the right to strike."

To salve over any impression such statements might make on the minds of his delegates, Green repeatedly has assured them their right to strike is "inalienable"—but only as a last resort.

Johnson Will Speak.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins are slated to address the convention this afternoon, assuring delegates they will not do wrong to abide by their leader's plea to have faith in the NRA and President Roosevelt. Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board, will also speak.

Lewis renewed demands for enlargement of the executive council from 11 to 25 members, while the metal trades unions insisted the policy of allowing mechanics to join "Federal unions," affiliated directly with the federation instead of acting through the "internationals" must be stopped.

Another dispute centered on the Brewers International Union, which, gaining new life with the advent of 3.2 beer, has brought to the A. F. of L. complaints that other unions are enrolling as members men in its own jurisdiction.

Salesman, Ill And Jobless, Shoots Self

Stepson Returning Home From School Finds Harry Witzig.

Harry Witzig, 37, committed suicide by shooting himself in the right temple at his home, Majestic Apartments, 1326 Euclid street northwest, yesterday afternoon. He was reported to have been despondent because of ill health.

Witzig's body was found by his stepson, Joseph Graham, 11, on his return from school.

Unable to force that locked front door, the boy told police, he climbed through a rear window and discovered his stepfather stretched upon the bed, a revolver across his chest.

Detective Sergeant Kenney said Witzig, a salesman unemployed for a year, left three notes stating his illness depressed him.

Witzig had been a patient at Mount Alto Hospital until recently.

Witzig's widow, Mrs. Bessie Witzig, was employed in a downtown department store. Witzig also leaves a stepdaughter, Glow Keyes Graham.

Charles E. Thompson Seriously Ill Here

Condition of Charles E. Thompson, Cleveland industrialist and donor of the Thompson Air Trophy, taken to Emergency Hospital Saturday, suffering from an attack of acute indigestion, was regarded as serious by attending physicians last night.

Thompson, 52, was stricken at the Wardman Park Hotel. He is president of the Thompson Products Co. and came here to confer with Recovery Administrator Hugh Johnson.

Germany Bars Jew Problem In Treaties

Challenges Right to Print It in Minorities Compacts.

Geneva, Oct. 3 (AP).—Germany today challenged the right to incorporate the German Jewish question within the terms of minorities treaties, under discussion in the political commission of the League of Nations.

Dr. Von Keller, German representative in the league, said it was "inadmissible" to join the two questions, and continued:

"The Jews in Germany are neither a linguistic nor a national minority. They have never felt themselves such and have never claimed treatment as such.

"The practice of the Jewish religion is quite free in Germany. The religious question bears no part in the conflict with the German people.

Heavy Jewish Migration.

"Above all, the problem in Germany is racial and social, which in the after-war period became especially intense through the heavy Jewish migration from eastern Europe."

Germany, Von Keller continued, stood ready to recognize the rights of the minorities, but was equally determined against assimilation.

"The idea of Germanization is unknown to us," the speaker continued, "but on the other hand we object to attempts to denationalize Germans."

Henri Bereriger, French delegate, asked whether in upper Silesia Germany had or had not agreed to respect the rights of minorities with regard to race or religion, and whether the German general law in regard to the Jews did not conflict with this agreement.

Resolution Offered.

R. J. Sandler, of Sweden, said he would like to see the whole German-Jewish question brought before the league assembly. Edouard Raezynski, of Poland, then proposed an international convention to guarantee the rights of minorities irrespective of religion, language or racial origin.

The Polish resolution was referred to the council for the drafting of a recommendation which will be presented to the assembly.

Although Dr. Von Keller disavowed Germany's intention to Germanize anyone, many delegates noted his declaration that a nation has the right to consider that all its people, even if separated from the Motherland by frontiers, "constitute a moral and cultural unity."

The Reich delegate added that "Germany attaches vast importance to the links attaching the individual with ethnical nationality."

Oil Code Upheld By Federal Judge

Refiners Must Continue to Make Reports.

Tyler, Tex., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Bryant upheld the NRA oil code here today in refusing an injunction sought by the Panama Refining Co. and others to restrain Federal officials from requiring reports of oil refined in the East Texas field.

Bryant based his ruling on "presumption of validity of the acts of constituted authorities" as did the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia recently in refusing an injunction to the Southport Refining Co.

Tug of 4 Police Groups Over Arrest Ends.

The argument between four separate agencies over who would arrest a 21-year-old colored youth, whose auto had killed a colored woman on the 1,000-foot strip of "no man's land," at the south end of Highway Bridge was settled finally last night, with Park police taking the boy into custody, charged with failing to exhibit his driver's permit.

Fourth Precinct police, headquarters detectives, Arlington County police and Park police all hurried to the scene of the accident early yesterday, but disagreed on jurisdiction.

The youth, John Thomas, Radio, Vt., told police the woman, identified as Mary Taylor, 35, South Washington, Va., stepped from the curb into the path of his car.

A certificate of accidental death was issued by acting Corner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Presbyterians Observe 250 Years in U. S.

Celebration Will Include Pilgrimage to Churches on Eastern Shore.

Plans were completed last night for the 250th anniversary celebration of American Presbyterianism, scheduled to begin this morning at 10 o'clock at Princess Anne, Md.

The celebration will include a pilgrimage to each of the Eastern Shore churches founded by Francis Makeme, "Father of American Presbyterianism." More than 5,000 persons from all parts of the Nation are expected to attend.

Speaking on the life of Makeme, the Rev. William P. Finney, retiring manager of the Presbyterian Historical Society, will open the services at the Manokin Church. Judge Samuel K. Dennis, of the Baltimore Supreme Court, will preside.

From Princess Anne the pilgrimage will extend to the Rehoboth Church at Rehoboth, Md. Rehoboth, founded in 1683, is considered by Presbyterian assemblies the first Presbyterian Church organized in the New World.

Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D. D., retiring moderator of the Virginia Synod, will preside over the services here. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. J. Ross Stevenson, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Harris E Kirk, pastor of the Franklin Street Church of Baltimore.

At 2:45 p. m. the pilgrimage will arrive at the Makeme monument, Makeme Park, Va., across the Pocomoke River from Rehoboth.

Germans Shun Arms Parleys

Want Delay Until Hitler Consolidates Home Position.

Geneva, Oct. 3 (AP).—It was learned tonight German delegates to the disarmament conference had told American representatives they preferred an adjournment of the forthcoming session to permit Chancellor Hitler to consolidate his internal political position.

The German delegation also revealed that Konstantin von Neurath, the German foreign minister, who went to Berlin last week after preliminary disarmament talks will not return to Geneva to pursue his negotiations with the representatives of other countries. These included Norman Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large; Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Joseph Paul-Boncour, French foreign minister.

M. Paul-Boncour left for Paris tonight to consult his government. Before leaving he told Mr. Davis France's disarmament policy was unchanged.

Blessing of Pope Wired to Dollfuss

Vatican City, Oct. 3 (AP).—Pope Pius telegraphed the papal nuncio, Enrico Sibilia, at Vienna today to convey congratulations to Chancellor Dollfuss on his escape from an assassin's bullets.

The Pope also sent his special benediction in recognition of the chancellor's efforts properly to govern Austria and expressed hope "the chancellor will continue with God's help to govern for the welfare of the country."

Jangled nerves bring words that hurt

Suppose a hidden phonograph were taking down your words all during the day. How often would you be embarrassed and shocked at the things you may have said under the stress of jangled nerves?

A sharp word, a fit of temper, an unfair accusation—these hurt your friends and your loved ones—and they hurt you, too.

Watch your nerves. Get your full amount of sleep every night. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation. And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

How long can you point at a mark on the wall without considerable wavering? Here's a sure way to show up nerves. It's used by many well-known doctors. A good score is two full minutes.

Score of Virgil Richard (Camel smoker), world-famous sharpshooter: 4 minutes, 40 seconds

$100,000 Ship Fee Received By Donovan

Attorney General's Aid Under Republicans Counseled Bidders.

Col. William J. Donovan, Assistant, Attorney General under Republican administrations, was paid a $100,000 fee for services to the Black Diamond Steamship Line, a Senate investigating committee revealed yesterday.

J. E. Dockendorff, president of the line, told the committee investigating ocean mail contracts that Donovan's law firm wrote a letter to President Hoover while the Black Diamond was battling the United States Line for purchase of vessels. The letter was written after Donovan resigned his Justice Department post.

Chairman Black, Democrat, Alabama, read a letter written by Dockendorff in which he maintained Government affairs were not handled on their merit. Dockendorff said he was "forced to play politics which made me go as high as the President of the United States," in a letter to a Dutch line operator.

Explanations Hushed.

The letter written by Donovan's firm to President Hoover said in part: "We are apprehensive that injury may be done to Government interests and gross injustice to our own client."

Dockendorff frequently attempted to make explanations, and Senator Black relentlessly shut him off, begging him to answer the questions.

Senator Black's sharp, "You'll have to be quiet, Mr. Dockendorff," was a frequent interruption.

The chairman entered evidence in the record that in considering bids the Shipping Board acted on a communication from Lawrence Richey, secretary to President Hoover, which had been sent to the board anonymously, and concerned the United States Lines.

Dockendorff admitted he knew of such a communication, but the text was not made public.

Ship Bid Raised.

Dockendorff said he had bid $14 a ton for the 13 Black Diamond vessels when the board decided to sell them in June, 1929.

"Was this lower than the other two bids, that of the United States Lines and the Cosmopolitan?" asked Senator Black.

"Yes."

Dockendorff then testified that his second bid was for $23.83 a ton.

"Just one cent a ton higher than the United States Lines' bid?" demanded the senator.

"Yes. But it didn't mean a thing," said the witness. "We were willing to go higher than the United States Lines to get the ships."

"Our Friend" Broached.

Cablegrams exchanged between Dockendorff and V. J. Sudeman, secretary-treasurer of the Black Diamond Lines, at the time of the bidding contained references to "Our friend," identified by Dockendorff as J. Caldwell Jenkins, then vice president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, now vice president of the Black Diamond Lines, who, according to the correspondence, was interested in advising Black Diamond officials concerning a proposed Shipping Board audit of the books of the Asaho company, a Dutch subsidiary of the Black Diamond.

Politics Cited.

Dockendorff succeeded in entering an explanation of how his company was "harrassed" and "tortured" by groups interested in keeping the Black Diamond from getting the vessels.

Senator Black read a letter by Dockendorff to his Dutch agent in which he said he "felt sure we'll get the ships awarded us. Congress and the administration are both with us."

$750,000 "Velvet."

A letter initialed by Dockendorff to A. J. County, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said the $750,000 annual subsidy would, with the lines under private ownership, "be all velvet."

Dockendorff admitted that "perhaps he had been wrong."

The letter said several additional ships could be built out of the subsidies.

Sudeman and Jenkins will be questioned today.

Fusion Backers Of LaGuardia Split on "Boss"

McKee and O'Brien Grin as Mayoralty Foes Lambast Seabury.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Internal revolt, which has torn Democratic ranks wide open, today found its way into the fusion forces backing the mayoralty candidacy of Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

"Bossism"—the cry raised by fusionists against Mayor John P. O'Brien, Tammanyite, and Joseph V. McKee, independent Democrat—was hurled back at Samuel Seabury, master fusion strategist.

The rebellion developed as a reaction to the failure of the fusion judicial convention to indorse Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman and to the selection of a third Seabury assistant to run on the fusion ticket.

Broadside at Seabury.

Joseph Levenson, Bronx Republican leader, brought the revolt against Seabury's dominance of the campaign into the open

"I have seen the bossism of Platt, O'Dell and Bill Barnes, of Croker and Murphy, but this fusion boss has been the most successful of them all," said Levenson.

Failure of the fusion judicial convention to indorse Rosenan, counsel to President Roosevelt when he was governor, was reported in some quarters to be Seabury's retaliation for the part James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, is charged to be playing in support of McKee's candidacy.

Last Year's Ghost.

Political leaders recalled that when Rosenman was turned down for renomination last year by Tammany Hall it was Seabury who protested violently. He called the refusal to indorse Rosenman, subsequently appointed by Gov. Lehman, an insult to President Roosevelt.

George Trosk, indorsed by the Fusion judicial convention for the Supreme Court nomination, was an aid to Seabury as counsel to the committee which investigated Mayor James J. Walker's administration.

Two other Seabury assistants are already on the Fusion ticket.

Fusion Foes Rejoice.

Backers of McKee and Tammany Hall were jubilant over Levenson's charges. They believed it dealt an important blow to the Fusion contentions—that McKee would be nominated by Edward J. Flynn, Bronx leader, and O'Brien by John F. Curry, Tammany chieftain.

Indications were the city would abandon voting machines for the election and use paper ballots, a plan opposed by fusionists. The change may be necessary, officials of the board of elections said, because there are so many tickets in the mayoralty race that the machines can not accommodate the names.

Rail Fare Cut Decision Scheduled for Friday

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Decision on the question of reducing railroad fares will be made by the Western Association of Railway Executives Friday; Harry G. Taylor, commissioner of Western railroads, said today.

A meeting was held today behind closed doors and was expected to produce a new rate formula. Western railroads were reported ready to install a new rate schedule whether Eastern roads agreed or not.

Four-Hour Day Demand Halts U. S. Building

Contractor and Labor Split Threatens Paralysis on More Sites.

A partial tieup in Federal building here began yesterday and threatened to spread as ironworkers were told "No jobs for you today" in response to their demands for a double-shift, four-hour day.

None was at work at the Postoffice, Justice Department, Supreme Court or City Postoffice addition, although the four-hour schedule was in use, at least temporarily, at the Central Heating Plant and Archives Building, where ironworkers were on the job.

Increasing opposition of contractors to the scheme and possibility that other trades would adopt it threatened to disrupt all major building operations in the District before the week ends.

An executive of a company constructing two of the Government buildings announced the short day will be refused, no matter what the consequences.

Contractors Oppose.

Contractors argue that the double shift would result in unnecessary loss of time and cut down efficiency.

Ironworkers engaged in delicate work can not be expected to take up a job at 11:30 a. m. without losing time and making avoidable mistakes, the contractors maintain. Leslie L. Myers, ironworkers' spokesman and agent, says such inefficiency would be obviated by foremen working through without a split shift.

He said the four-hour day has been accepted at the Central Heating Plant, Potomac Electric Power Co., Agriculture Department extension, Treasury Building vaults and on other projects.

The split shift, new to union labor in the District, was instituted to spread work among 400 iron workers unemployed here, Myers said.

Technical Strike.

A technical strike went into effect when the iron workers, notified they would be hired on a one-shift, eight-hour day basis, failed to report for work yesterday.

Prospects of resumption of work at the Labor-I. C. C. buildings, suspended September 15 in a dispute between carpenters and ironworkers, brightened yesterday. William L. Hutcheson, president of the carpenters' international union, will attend dedication exercises at the Gompers memorial, in Washington Saturday.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board, has been trying for weeks to bring Hutcheson and P. J. Morrin, iron workers president, to terms. Morrin is here attending the A. F. of L. convention, but Hutcheson did not come to Washington for the session.

Solomon Heads Airport Group

Steps Taken to Combine Washington, Hoover in Suitable Field.

Election of Samuel Solomon, Washington attorney, as vice president and director of National Airport Corporation, general manager of Washington Airport, and secretary and director of National Air Lines, was announced here yesterday by company officials.

For two years he has acted as counsel for the interest which have acquired the Washington airport and Hoover Field.

Solomon began yesterday to clear the way for elimination of Military road and joining of the two fields into a suitable airport.

Besides his airport duties Solomon is associated with operating companies who hope to inaugurate a new high-speed passenger service to New York in competition with Eastern Air Transport, present carrier and contractor to the Federal Government for air mail transportation.

Trolley Firms Hit by Clayton

Merger Will Not Bring Fare Cut, Asserts Head of Citizens' Group.

"Washington may expect no reduction in fares from its two merged street railways," said William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, last night.

Speaking before a meeting of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, Mr. Clayton blamed alleged poor service on "disastrous failure" of the two companies to abide by their charter requirements.

Because the companies have not allowed for depreciation, some of the 26-year-old cars will continue to rattle through the streets, Mr. Clayton warned. Although the merged companies will have on hand $4,000,000 in cash, no great improvement in equipment can be expected, because earnings have been only about 1½ per cent on capital investment, he said.

More than $300,000 has been saved to domestic gas consumers the last year by action of the associations, Mr. Clayton stated. Through petitions circulated by the federation, a temporary reduction of 8½ per cent was made in gas rates during delays in valuation hearings of the Washington Gas Light Co. before the Public Utility Commission.

Philipsborn
ELEVENTH ST. - BETWEEN F & G

Let's talk it over...

Fashions have always been things of the moment . . .

Costs at the present time are definitely increasing . . .

Prices must necessarily rise in proportion to costs . . .

Up-to-the minute fashions must have

Up-to-the-minute prices . . . that's logic

Please note that we place fashion first

that's what Philipsborn has always signified

that's what Philipsborn's patrons always prefer

that's what Philipsborn's windows always display

that's why we will not sacrifice fashion to price.

We wouldn't insult our clientele by offering yesterday's fashions at yesterday's prices.

Fashion apparel must be replaced by new models to keep up-to-date at all times, and that cannot be done by placing orders two and three months in advance.

Today's prices must accompany today's merchandise.

Comparative prices are generally meaningless, with conditions as they are, and we do not employ replacement price quotations or comparatives except on merchandise that is being reduced for clearance. Our prices are always low in proportion to quality.

Aren't we right?

500,000 Young Americans "Riding Rods" to Nowhere

Railway Agent Says Horde of Aimless Wanderers Is Serious Problem.

Half a million persons are "riding the rods" in their aimless wanderings over the country, it was announced here yesterday by the American Railway Association.

Ninety per cent of the wanderers are under 25 years of age, according to the statement of T. E. Pratt, chief special agent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

Because of increase in the number of persons stealing rides on trains, railroads are unable to cope with the trespasser situation, Mr. Pratt said, addressing the safety section of the association at Chicago.

"Railroad police," he said, "have found the professional hobo does not resent being ejected from a train." He added the new class of wanderers is resentful and show displeasure by placing obstructions on tracks.

"It is not uncommon," Pratt said, "to see a freight train on which there are as many as 150 riders. When a derailment occurs, many are injured or killed and often they are never identified.

President's Legion Address.

In his address to the American Legion President Roosevelt courageously reaffirmed his opposition to payment of pensions to veterans whose disabilities are nonservice connected. Generous compensation to those injured in the service is a recognized obligation of the Government, but the President can see no valid reason for placing all those who wore uniforms in a "special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens."

Sick and disabled veterans, the President thinks, are entitled to the same sort of consideration accorded to other classes in the community, if their disabilities are not the result of service connection. Moreover, the President affirms that it is the duty of the individual in such cases to pay for his own treatment if he can afford to do so. If he can not, responsibility rests first with the local community and then with the State. Only after individual and local governmental efforts have been found wanting, should the Federal Government be called upon to aid distress.

At a time when individuals, States and municipalities are increasingly inclined to shift their financial burdens to the Federal Government, it is encouraging to find the President vigorously expounding the doctrine of individual responsibility and the duty of State and local governments to care for the destitute in their midst. Without such admonitions the American people are in danger of forgetting that the United States is a federation of supposedly sovereign States with a central government of limited powers.

The President made a strong appeal to the veterans based on the tendency of mounting pension outlays to impair the credit of the Government. He stated bluntly that if the Government itself is bankrupt, human suffering can not be cared for and industry can not be restored. In other words, the credit of the Government must be maintained in order to meet emergency needs of all sorts, including veteran relief.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1933, the Veterans' Administration expended about $763,000,000, while advances from the adjusted service certificate fund amounted to $100,000,000. With total ordinary expenditures approximating $4,000,000,000, it will be apparent that the veterans' bill of costs constitutes a large percentage of the whole. Furthermore, with expenditures for the regular establishments close to the minimum, barring extensive administrative reorganization and with the public debt service representing a large item of expense, it is plain that elimination of the deficit in the ordinary budget required drastic cuts in the pension outlay.

The President emphasized this conclusion, although he did not specifically state these facts. His appeal was especially impressive because it was based upon broad general principles and stressed the paramount importance of sound fiscal policies in the interest of all classes, veterans included.

Underworld Lawyers.

A campaign against attorneys who work in collusion with gangsters appears to be in prospect as an outgrowth of the Urschel kidnaping case. Department of Justice officials have been aroused by an alleged confession of a young Tennessee attorney that he was acting as an agent of "Machine Gun" Kelly in trying to obtain part of the Urschel ransom money hidden in Texas. His case serves to concentrate attention upon the activities of underworld lawyers.

The Government has one weapon that may be used against lawyers serving racketeering gangs. It is found in section 141 of the United States criminal code. Under this statute any person attempting to rescue an individual in the custody of Federal officers, or to aid such an individual to escape, is liable to a $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment. The same punishment may be inflicted upon persons who knowingly harbor or conceal fugitives from justice.

Where criminal prosecution is impractical, it is reported, the Department of Justice will institute disbarment proceedings against underworld attorneys. Lawyers who are admitted to the bars of their respective States and are permitted to practice in the Federal courts assume a moral responsibility to uphold the law in addition to the legal requirements made of them. Members who serve as cat's paws for criminal gangs are a disgrace to the profession. A movement for their disbarment will have the hearty support of the great majority of lawyers.

One primary purpose of bar associations is to maintain high standards of conduct among their members and to discipline attorneys engaged in unethical practices. Why should not the bar associations take an active part in this proposed campaign to rid the profession of agents for gangdom?

It must be recognized, of course, that every accused person has a right to legal counsel. But there are indications that some lawyers have been contaminated by the loot of crime to the extent that they devote their full time to the frustration of law enforcement against known gangsters. By weeding out shysters of this type the bar associations could perform a valuable service to the public.

The Struggle Begins.

Yesterday's opener of the world series confirmed the rumor that Carl Hubbell is a great pitcher. The Giants won because of him. The Nationals' pitchers were not his match, although three were tried out.

It is an agonizing time when three men are on bases in the ninth, with no one out, and all three runs needed to win. The men coming to bat in this situation are under the severest possible test of nerve steadiness. One of the three Nationals fell victim to the Giants' deceptive pitcher, and the others were easily thrown out. So ended the inning and the game.

Hubbell is all that he was advertised. The Nationals are put on their mettle to win the series. But perhaps this initial setback is the tonic required to get the boys into the fighting mood. Possibly they were a little overconfident, after having walked over all the teams in the American League.

Only rarely has any team won four straight world's series games. If the winners are to drop a game or two, it is best to lose at the beginning and have the agony over. Baseball opinion throughout the country reckons the Nationals superior to the Giants, and Washington firmly believes they will prove to be champions of the world. They will not always face Hubbell, but even when he comes up again they may have had two or three victories to encourage them. The Giants are yet to face the best pitcher in the Nationals' list.

Public interest in the series is greatly increased by the outcome of the opening game. It is to be a royal struggle, with correspondingly greater honor to the victors.

Protection for India.

Answering allegations that a vast army under British control is required to keep India in subjugation, the military correspondent of the London Morning Post prepared a rejoinder in the form of a map of India upon which were superimposed outlines of the twenty leading countries of Europe. The combined area of this score of western nations equals that of India, and their combined population amounts to 322,000,000, while that of India totals 351,000,000.

After showing that India's inhabitants outnumber those of the twenty nations by 29,000,000, with an area of equal size, the correspondent asserts that the army strength of India is 234,000, while the combined forces of the European countries number 2,229,000. It is contended, furthermore, that in questions of external defense and internal security India presents problems that are peculiar to that country.

The difficult northwestern frontier requires a large force to guard against the raids that from time immemorial have come from that direction. The bulk of the army, however, is used for practical police duty throughout the country in connection with the continually recurring communal troubles and religious quarrels. Of the total Indian army only 60,000 are British troops, but the influence of this 25 per cent in a land of caste and religious differences is of undisputed importance in the maintenance of peace in India.

The Wheat Problem.

Soviet Russia has refused to participate in the world wheat agreement. The Soviet held out for an export quota of 75,000,000 bushels, about twice the allotment contemplated in the world wheat agreement. Canada and the United States offered to share with the Soviet any benefits that might accrue from an increased world demand for wheat, but the Moscow government was not interested in such a concession.

Further negotiations may be expected, but it appears that the Soviet will remain outside of the agreement unless its quota is expanded. If the Soviet is not brought within the agreement, its exports may complicate the efforts of the United States, Canada, Argentina, Australia and the Danubian countries to raise world wheat prices. Unlike the United States, the Soviet is reported to be harvesting a large crop this year, and its exports may assume considerable importance in view of the constricted world market for wheat.

The full burden of dealing with this situation seems to have been left to the United States and Canada. Argentina and Australia did not send delegates to the conference with the Soviet. If concessions are made to Russia, they will be at the expense of North American farmers.

Wheat growers in this country were already scheduled to make a greater sacrifice than farmers in other lands for the purpose of stabilizing world prices. Australia's exports in recent years have ranged from 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 bushels. That country was given a quota of 105,000,000 bushels. Argentina normally has about 140,000,000 bushels for export. Her quota under the agreement is 110,000,000 bushels. Canada was allowed a quota of 200,000,000 bushels, although her average annual exports do not exceed 280,000,000. The United States normally produces about 200,000,000 bushels in excess of the domestic demand, and it went into the conference with a carryover of 260,000,000 bushels above normal, yet this country obtained an export quota of only 47,000,000 bushels.

A statement by Secretary Wallace indicates that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is having difficulty in restricting next year's crop to the limits anticipated in the international agreement. The time allotted for enlistment of farmers in the acreage-reduction movement expired last Tuesday. Only 4,600,000 acres have been pledged for withdrawal, according to the latest tabulation, although the program calls for 9,000,000 acres. Farmers in the heart of the wheat belt seem to be cooperating, but in States where wheat is a secondary crop farmers are reluctant to reduce their acreage.

"Even if we got a 100 per cent sign-up and took 9,000,000 acres out of production," says Secretary Wallace, "normal yields on the reduced acreage would give us more than 700,000,000 bushels of wheat next year. * * * With the fullest success of the wheat program, there is likely to be wheat from the 1934 crop to add to the surplus."

When this situation is added to the demands of Soviet Russia for an export quota twice as large as is provided for in the world wheat agreement, the prospects of price stabilization do not appear to be encouraging. The problem of reducing crops to the domestic demand of each country, plus its export quota, may be much more difficult than was negotiation of the agreement. The small quota allotted to the United States makes the balancing of production with the market demand particularly difficult in this country.

The Municipal Center Project.

The District Commissioners are about to renew their appeal to the Public Works Administration for an allotment of $4,600,000 toward construction of the Municipal Center.

Secretary Ickes recently expressed the opinion that considerable sums already had been allotted to the District, and that perhaps proposals from the States should be given preference to the Municipal Center project. He did not rule out this project, however, and is expected to hear the Commissioners with an open mind.

The District proposal has several advantages over most of the projects submitted by States and municipalities.

Many of those proposals are mere paper projects, not completed designs. Secretary Ickes has complained of the delay of the States and municipalities in coming forward with definite projects which meet the conditions laid down by the Public Works Administration as to engineering feasibility and public need.

The Municipal Center project meets these requirements. The site is owned by the District government, and all buildings have been cleared off, ready for construction. The plans for the new center have been approved by the Fine Arts Commission. The project has been authorized by Congress. Within 30 days a contract could be let for the foundation, and before that work could be finished all specifications for the superstructure would have been completed in readiness for letting a construction contract for the first unit, to house the District police, municipal and juvenile courts, the Police Department, and other services.

The Commissioners will stress the urgent need of a new building for the local courts. The present quarters are entirely unsatisfactory. The Bar Association and other local bodies have urged early construction of a new court building.

In view of the fact that this District improvement is in shape for immediate construction work, in which a large number of men could be employed, it is hoped that Secretary Ickes can be convinced that the District should not be made to suffer a long delay because of the unreadiness of other localities to submit definite projects.

City Playgrounds.

There are few American cities that would not benefit by an extension of local playgrounds. Under the Federal reconstruction program a number of municipalities are considering the establishment of new recreation sites as one feature of their public improvement policy.

Students of the subject point out that it is not enough merely to provide facilities for play, since without proper supervision playgrounds are abused or not used. In many cases parents prefer to keep children under their own supervision rather than let them go to unattended play centers.

Instead of providing additional playgrounds, it is contended in some cases that it would be better to utilize available funds to employ competent leaders instead of adding to grounds without supervision. In some cities expenses are minimized by voluntary trained helpers who assist one paid leader. It is important, however, that direction be delegated to persons who have studied the work in a regular course.

The position of playground leader is not one for a person whose attitude is that of a policeman. A leader must have organizing ability, understanding of children, tact, enthusiasm and unlimited patience.

By systematizing a playground many more children can be accomodated and a proper use of all apparatus can be made. There is much evidence to show that when a recreation center is properly supervised it is utilized to the fullest extent, and with more beneficial results for attending children. Washington has some excellent examples of playgrounds under professional care and instruction.

Cities may well consider the advisability of supplying all such centers with proper leadership before adding to the number of recreation grounds that must remain unattended.

MR. HOOVER SMILES.

("With a conspicuous smile, missing a year ago, former President Hoover visited old friends here."—Des Moines news item.)

"I dunno as I ought to speak of it, Herbert, but——"

"What is it?"

"Well, as an old friend, maybe it's all right for me to call attention to it."

"Go on. What's the matter?"

"It's just this: You're smilin'."

"Oh, that's all right."

"I thought maybe you didn't know it."

"I smile right along now. It used to be a real effort, but since I left Washington there's nothing to it."

"You used to look so serious and sad. We used to speak about it when we saw you in the newsreels."

"If you'd been in my place you'd have looked serious and sad."

* * * *

"When did you first notice yourself smilin' again?"

"It sort of crept over me. After I'd been out as President six weeks the wife called attention to the fact that I grinned occasionally. Before I knew it I was smiling easily."

"It's different not being President, hey?"

"You have no idea what a relief it is to be free. Take fishing, for instance. I don't have to go fishing now unless I feel like it, and when I go it's a fishing trip, not a military review."

"That's true."

"And take electric buttons; gosh, but it seems great to be away from those things! I haven't pressed a button in seven months. I can walk right past new bridges and cornerstone layings now without paying a bit of attention."

* * * *

"It must seem fine, Herb."

"And, boy, what a relief it is not to have to throw out any first balls! What an ordeal that was! There never was any sense trying to make a pitcher out of a President, anyhow."

"I often wondered how a President felt opening a baseball world series."

"It's one of the worst bores of the office. If you could just toss out a ball and be done with it it would be okay, but you have to stand there throwing 'em out until 500 cameramen get the right pose. Bah!"

"The camera must take a lot out of a President."

"You can't realize it unless you've been through it. Newsreel men on your heels morning and night. I remember I even used to suspect they were under the bed at night."

* * * *

"You sure look happier, Herb."

"I tell you it's wonderful. No more baby kissing, no more locomotive cab riding, no more Indian rituals."

"Well, it's fine to see you happy and smilin'. What do you think about the depression?"

"The what?"

"The depression."

"For land's sake! Haven't they got rid of that yet?"

"BOB, SON OF BATTLE."

Of all the dog stories I have ever read, this is the best.

While, in the history of mankind, horses, oxen, and camels have been more useful than dogs, there is no other animal so close to man in intimate friendship. So far back as literature goes, we find the noble fidelity and devotion of the dog receiving its due tribute. In the ancient literature of India, when the good man came to the gates of Paradise and found his dog was not to be admitted, he declined to enter himself. Pope celebrated this in his Essay on Man:

But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,—
His faithful dog shall bear him company.

Homer, in the Odyssey, paid a beautiful tribute. When Ulysses, after 20 years' absence, returned to his home clad in rags, no one recognized him except the old dog, who saw in this apparently filthy beggar his king and master. He wagged his tail and died of joy.

In "Bob, Son of Battle," first published in 1898, we have two dogs which represent the principle of good and the principle of evil. The Grey Dog of Kenmuir is opposed by Red Wull; and as the most interesting character in Paradise Lost is Satan, so in this novel the devilish Red Wull is more interesting than his chivalrous and knightly opponent.

You May Call the Plow-Hand Vice President, But He Must Still Plow

By Robert Quillen.

There is one group of citizens that isn't satisfied with the NRA plan to benefit working people.

The members of this group call themselves "wage slaves" and dream of a social revolution that will change everything for the better.

But in all their dreaming they overlook the fact that revolutions change conditions and not men.

Our mechanical civilization has reached the point where the great majority of us are "wage slaves." Whether we wear blue denim or a white collar, and whether our reward is called wages or salary, most of us have a boss.

Whether that arrangement is good or bad, there is only one alternative. That is the system that prevailed in the "good old days" before machines were invented.

Then each family was an independent unit, growing and making the things it needed, and the few "specialists" who served the well-to-do had one-man shops and did their work by hand.

They were a self-reliant and independent people; but they lived hard at best, for their combined effort was not enough to produce abundance.

Civilization won't go back to that state—not unless it is wrecked. It isn't in human nature to go backward except in disaster.

For good or ill, society is organized and regimented for quantity production. Industries are consolidated and centralized. One big factory employing thousands produces goods for millions.

And each man employed has the job for which he is qualified.

Suppose there should be a revolution. Suppose the "wage slaves" should take control, or suppose the Government should confiscate all machinery.

When order was restored, the wheels of industry would turn again, wouldn't they? It would still be necessary to tend the machines, wouldn't it?

Well, what would the "wage slaves" do then? They couldn't all sit at desks and boss. Few of them would know how, anyway.

Under any kind of system, each man must do the work for which he is qualified—whether as general manager, auditor, foreman or sweeper. Social revolution can't make every man in the mill general manager.

Labor's hope is in higher wages. A new system could mean nothing more than new words to describe the old one.

Washington Airport.
Aeronautical News.

We have just been going over a lot of press clippings concerning the Washington-Hoover Airport. It seems the capable Washington Post is doing all in its power to prove to official Washington that its city should be the one spot in the Nation that should have a very good field, if not the best. In this thought every pilot and many influential people in aeronautics agree, yet nothing is done to give the city a good safe airport.

Is this to be another spot which will just be a landing place of sorts until a bad crack-up occurs, only to have all the big shots running around wondering why things have to happen in official Washington? Perhaps after seeing the airport at Washington our legislators place the whole of aeronautics in the same category.

It certainly must seem strange for a visitor from a foreign nation to fly into Washington and see that field. Remember he is acquainted with the fine fields of foreign countries. He knows the high place American aviation holds in world-wide aeronautics. He flies into Washington, and picture to yourself what he thinks. Why not the finest airport for Washington?

Too Much Government.
Houston Post.

The French government is in desperate financial straits, due for the most part to too much government.

There are 858,500 persons on the public pay roll, including about 125,000 army and navy officers and professional soldiers.

Premier Daladier is demanding that Parliament cut the pensions pay of functionaries and military men, which is nearly half of the budget.

The French economists are saying that if the budget could be cut a fourth, most other problems would be solved, because the lower taxes would reduce the cost of living, stimulate business at home and abroad, and give the common man hope and courage.

It is the same the world over; governmental establishments have enlarged and enlarged and enlarged to where it requires more than a fair share of the people's substance to maintain them.

PERPETUAL BONDS.

Some bonds never mature and the principal never is repaid to the investor, says Collier's. There are about four such irredeemable issues in existence, the largest being a 4 per cent debenture issue of the Canadian Pacific Railway that amounts to nearly $300,000,000.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

IT IS beginning to look as though Mr. Roosevelt's ambition to build up what might be very well called a Farmer - Labor party is to be beset by difficulties he had not anticipated.

Bargeron.

It has been quite apparent since his election that he would like to absorb the Progressive wing of the Republican party, that he considered the best chance of victory in 1936 lay through the West and the South and subsequently he has come to place an unusual emphasis on labor.

At first his trouble seemed to be in absorption of the Progressives insofar as they are reflected in the Senate. He put three nonsenate Progressives in his cabinet and his administration generally was attuned to the Progressives' wants.

* * * *

BUT the Senate Progressives, insofar as they, themselves, were concerned, held steadfast against his importunities to come into the fold. None was so stubborn in this, in fact, than Senator George Norris, dean of the cause. Day after day he counseled the younger men against giving up their Pregressive identity, although professing great admiration for what Mr. Roosevelt was doing in a Progressive way. Maybe, he thought Mr. Roosevelt might not remain so progressive or else the Progressives might sometime come into power in their own right.

This latter argument must have appealed to the younger ones, particularly Bob La Follette, who has a right to envisage himself as a Republican President some day. At any rate, the Senate Progressives turned down his cabinet and other offers and their ranks remained untouched. In fact, they showed their gratitude to Mr. Roosevelt by voting against him once or twice, particularly on the economy bill when they lined up solidly with the Republican Old Guard.

* * * *

THERE have been some indications since adjournment that Mr. Roosevelt has broken into their reserves. It may be that often his continued performance they realize there is no thunder left for them, that Mr. Roosevelt has taken it all, that he has even out-Progressived them.

One indication that they were weakening and figuring they may as well come on in was the report some time ago dealing with Phil La Follette, brother of Bob. The report mostly had to do with Mr Roosevelt's trying to get rid of Brother Humphreys and the Federal Trade Commission. He wanted to give the job to Phil, it was said.

Well, one naturally assumes that Phil's name would not have been given out had he not been willing to take the place. And if Phil was willing to do this it would seem the La Follette brothers have given up and were ready to surrender.

* * * *

WITH this apparent advance in his plan, however, trouble seems to be developing for Mr. Roosevelt from another quarter. It will do no good to bring Phil and Bob and other Progressive leaders into the fold if he cannot bring their constituents. Mr. Peek and Mrs. Wallace and others of the Progressive hue were brought in—in 1928—it will be recalled, but they brought none of the voters with them.

The difficulty Mr. Roosevelt now seems to have encountered is in making labor so class-conscious. His working out of a Farmer-Labor program, of course, meant catering to the two groups. He would like to make one harmonious group of them. He has succeeded only in bringing out the disharmony that has existed between the two since labor came to be a class with which to be reckoned.

In their mutual misery of the depression they affected a solid front but now with things on the upgrade they rapidly are squaring away at their old positions of enmity.

To realize this one has to perceive only the almost open hostility of the A. A. A. to the NRA and to hear grumblings from agricultural regions, merited or not, that the NRA program is making the farmer's plight harder.

And labor, instead of showing a disposition to listen to these plaints, makes no bones about intending to hold on to its gains—and going out for more. That is the temper of the American Federation of Labor meeting here. If you were to go up to it in the Willard Hotel and suggest that it wait for its old depression friend, the farmer, you would get a most hearty laugh. It doesn't know what "wait" means.

At the Close.

Not that I shall die rich or very great.
I'd rather when the journey ends
Wear a few flowers, sent by friends,
Than have my coffined body lie in state.
I want no mounted guardsmen at my gate
To drive away the poor man who attends,
For I shall need the humble prayer he sends
That God have mercy as He scrolls my fate.

A few true tears are all the praise I'd ask
From those who've known me best and understood.
Just to be missed from my accustomed task
A little while will mark my labor good.
Just to be spoken of when old friends meet
Will change to victory many a sad defeat.

Author Finally Wins Suit Against Plagiarist; General Sherrill's Book Reviewed.

Cases of literary plagiarism are rare. Those adjudicated in the courts are more rare, and those which a court decides in favor of the plaintiff (i. e., the original author) are the rarest of all But Dashiell Hammett, able writer of mystery stories, and his publishers in England, Cashell's, Inc., recently obtained an injunction against an English firm which printed a thriller based on Hammett's "The Maltese Falcon." The plagiarist, a youth of 24, admitted he copied the work "just for fun."

Traveling Ambassador.

"MOSAICS IN ITALY, PALESTINE, SYRIA, TURKEY AND GREECE." By Charles H. Sherrill. (Illustrated). London: John Lane, 15 shillings.

Gen. Sherrill, author of many books, who has just retired from his post as Ambassador of the United States to Turkey, here takes his readers on a tour of Mediterranean cities in quest of beautiful and striking mosaics. The matter of the book, however, is not confined within the narrow limits of the title.

It is a travel book the author has produced, and the reader who happens to care very little about mosaics may still find much to inform and entertain him. Gen. Sherrill has an observant eye for scenery and a deep regard for historical settings. The beauty of Jerusalem he finds awe-inspiring, and nowhere has he seen anything more entrancing than the view from the summit of the Mount of Olives.

The sunset view of the minarets of Istanbul (Constantinople) is a memory that never fades. Palermo, "the loveliest spot in all of lovely Sicily," he describes in glowing detail. Florence, a place where "history and beauty are on every side," impresses him with its "strange, lingering charm." Where, among European cities, he asks, may an overworked American most profitably go for a fortnight's holiday? To many travelers he has put the question, and though some have spoken for Munich and others for Oxford, the great majority have cast their votes for Florence.

It is perhaps of Ravenna, however, that General Sherrill has written with the deepest appreciation. For among its seven mosaic-adorned sanctuaries is the tomb—in form a tiny church—of the Empress Regent, Galla Placidia, a lady whose romantic history he finds of absorbing interest and whose tomb he deems the most enchanting structural art-work within his knowledge. The reader who, never having seen Ravenna, chances to light upon this passage, cannot but wish to drop everything and take the next boat for Italy. A richly informative book is this, and no less a book of grace and charm in the writing.

Her Sister's Keeper.

"PROTECTING MARGOT," by Alice Grant Rosman. Minton, Balch, $2.00.

Here is a book which makes one glad people are still writing novels. True, the characters may not have been drawn from life, but it would be easy to make believe they had. To cap it off, the author, without apparent intent to moralize, preach or reform, seems really to "get somewhere."

Margot had not been married to Richard very long when he ran away with her cousin, the extraordinarily beautiful Eve. Nobody in the family ever understood or forgave him except Margot, who realized from the beginning that no one should be blamed for not resisting Eve's loveliness. She herself had not been able to, had sat for hours just watching her.

However, Richard's sister-in-law, Clara, didn't see it that way. For Clara life was quite simple. God had created the world and put her in it as director general. Richard had not only upset her scheme of things by failing to stand by the marriage she had arranged for him; he had actually brought scandal into the family. It became her duty, therefore, "to protect poor Margot" from the results of Richard's actions. This protection, which increased as Clara's fortune dwindled and Margot's income steadied, was far more devastating for Margot than Richard's desertion had been.

And then, back from India comes Nicholas, Margot's youngest cousin, the one regarded as being as unimportant as Margot, the only one of them who had ever received and returned her affection. He is just in time to fall in love with Richard's and Eve's illegitimate daughter.

Margot is a person the reader will not soon forget—a lovable woman of 43, "with a wistful kindness for young people, remembering her own bewildered youth."

Fashion Goes Back 20 Years For Feathers

1933 Silhouette Is Cousin to 1913 Sheath, But It's Sleeker.

Going back to good old "prewar," or looking forward to the winter, it's feathers, feathers, feathers.

Fashion has done one of her cycles again, and the 1933 silhouette is a first cousin to the 1913 sheath, with plumage, but sleeker and more slithery, with a frou-frou of flounces instead of a slit to make the walking easier.

It took tango tunes to show off those sheath skirts at their best in the good old bygone day, and the 1933 Miss should also enter to soft, seductive music to get the proper effect with her combined cape-fan of coque feathers.

Adapted to Tall Girl.

The tall and lissome lass is best adapted to this newest feathered novelty. One model that won admiring applause at a fashion show here featured flame-colored feathers, worn over a figure-fitting white evening gown, with a sash half green, half flame, belting the waist, falling to the floor in four loose ribbon streamers in front.

From a band that fitted tightly about the neck, the flame coque feathers, in curling rows, fell in a cape, almost to the waistline. And when their graceful wearer took them off and gathered the neckband up in her hand a gorgeous fan they made:

Red Buckle on White.

Smart, too, was the small miss who wore a white evening dress with no touch of color upon it, but a red belt buckle and red feathered fringe—ostrich—to her sheer evening hankie.

Of ostrich feathers, blue and pink, black and white, combined with matching taffeta, were the tiny little evening muffs in which parading models artfully concealed vanity cases.

Even evening bags showed the feathered influence.

For one cape, curled ostrich tips made almost an Elizabethan ruche-effect in back, and the cape cascaded down in ostrich fringe.

Feathered Boas Back.

Feathered boas were agin in the show cases, though some of them were being called scarfs. Feathers airily fringed armholes.

Something that looked very like the first cousin of the old "picture hat" came back into the modern scene in a black velvet, of brim, with a fluffy sky blue ostrich plume for trim, showing off to perfection with a black velvet gown with sky blue taffeta subtly lining the loops that piled on top of each other to make "wide shoulders." The adjective to describe it all was "dressy!"

As for the majority of the millinery—it was all to the "cap and feather." Cute, close-fitting, over-one-eye models, cox-combed, with a sassy small feather somewhere!

Jaunty Subdeb Coats Use Many Different Furs

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

Information as to where styles of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

The subdebs are having their own way (as they so often do). They're wearing nearly all the furs that their mothers do on new winter coats. And without complaint from the mothers . . . because when those furs are cut along young lines they no longer look too old.

So you'll see them stepping along this winter with chins lifted over collars of Persian lamb, mink, kolinsky and squirrel as well as the caracul and beaver that formerly were considered young enough.

We saw two subdeb daughters get outfitted in a smart shop just this week. The fair-haired one finally found a coat that made her head shine out as fresh and young as any mother could want. Slick, alert-lined black, with Persian tied scarf spread out in butterfly effect, and fur epaulets capping her square, held-back shoulders.

The brown-haired sister wasn't to be outdone in a coat of glowing dark green with brown caracul richly contrasting. Stand-up collar, epaulets, fur sleeves, as you see in the sketch. A coat to make all the crowd talk about.

Another enviably youthful coat has a yoke effect and stand-up collar of short fur . . . the yoke cut slant-wise across the front. Others use puffs, inserts and strips of encrusted fur.

Of course, the young ladies can wear fluffy fox, too. Especially in collars that stand high on the shoulders, either swirled in a circle around the neck or tying with the fabric of the coat.

Whatever the fur, long or short, keeping it high about the neck and shoulders seems to be the trick of keeping it young. Which is no doubt the reason Fashion uses it so much this year in coats for everybody.

Dolly Belittles War With Alice On 'Who's First'

Mrs. Gann Explains How "Battle of Precedence" Came About.

New York, Oct. 3.—"The 'war' was no war at all," declares Dolly Gann, referring to the famous (and alleged) "battle of precedence" between herself and Alice Roosevelt Longworth early in the Hoover administration.

"However," she adds in "Dolly Gann's Book," reminiscences of her Washington career published today, "even an absurd rumor usually has a start in fact. * * *

"If my memory is correct, brother (Vice President Curtis) was asked casually by a correspondent, just after the inauguration in March, 1929, whether I was to be his hostess, and he replied, 'Of course.' Something was printed about it, a paragraph or two.

"Brother wrote a formal letter notifying the State Department that I was to represent him. This letter required no answer, so my brother was astonished when he received from Secretary Kellogg a letter saying that I might sit at the head of our own table—a privilege which I certainly would have granted to myself without his permission!

"A few days later, at the end of March, the department informed the members of the Diplomatic Corps, in a formal note, that at state functions I should be seated below the ambassador's wives. This notice was not the result of any query or request from the Vice President. * * *

"Brother promptly demurred to Secretary Kellogg's precedence ruling, in a letter which stated, in effect, that the place of the head of his household was not where the State Department had indicated, but in the front of the line, so to speak. Before this letter was answered Mr. Kellogg retired and was succeeded by Mr. Stimson * * *.

Stimson Is Diplomatic.

"Brother wrote to the new secretary a letter asking that the Kellogg ruling be revised. Mr. Stimson was in something of a quandry * * * The upshot of it was that Mr. Stimson proved himself a jolly good diplomat—by referring the puzzle to the Diplomatic Corps * * *.

"They met at the British Embassy and settled it by deciding that the Vice President's sister was entitled to the ranking place and that they would welcome 'with great pleasure' my presence in the capacity of his hostess * * *.

"But the gossip would not down. Just how it came about that Alice Roosevelt Longworth's name first appeared, I don't know. If she ever said anything about it, then or later, I never heard of it."

Only the Soft, Lustrous Fleece of the Most Exclusive South American Alpaca Is Used in

MT. ROCK ALPACIAN TOPCOATS

If the Alpaca had grown his fleece especially for use in topcoats, he could not have done a better job. This is because his own requirements are much the same as those of the man who wants a topcoat to provide luxurious comfort in chill breezes, and yet, to be so light as to maintain this comfort in the more "in-between" weather.

For the Alpaca—that curious animal that frequents the high peaks of the Andes—is as indifferent to heat and moisture as it is to cold. Its coat is composed of soft, silky fibers that readily accommodate themselves to varying temperatures.

From the finest quality of Alpaca fleece, Mt. Rock produces a topcoating specially fabricated to produce a beautiful, gracefully draping cloth that retains all the natural luster and softness for which the fleece is noted. Choose from several models and colors.

Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay Back in City

Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, Distinguished Countryman, Guest at British Embassy; French Embassy Entertains.

The Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay arrived in Washington last evening from New York, where they arrived yesterday aboard the Majestic, after spending the summer in England. They were accompanied to this country by Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, who will be a guest at the embassy during his stay in Washington.

Sir Frederick, who is chief economic adviser to the British government, has been appointed to continue the conversations with the President on the British war debt. Last spring he accompanied Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald to Washington, and at that time was a guest at the embassy, when he shared in the brilliant entertainment for the Prime Minister.

Sir Frederick is an official who has reached high position and yet is almost unknown to the masses of the English people. He has an unassuming, abstracted manner and seems always to be pondering intricate problems. He is of much the same stature as the genial and charming Sir Ronald Lindsay, of whom he is a close friend. At the age of 22 he entered the treasury and later was secretary to Lord Asquith, then Prime Minister. Though only 46 years of age, Sir Frederick is one of the world's leading experts on international finance. If he decided to transfer his financial activities from the official to the commercial sphere he could command numerous high positions, but it seems likely he will continue to serve in his present capacity until the time comes when he can serve still more effectively from the red benches of the upper house of Parliament. With this brilliant figure in their household for a visit, Ambassador and Lady Lindsay doubtless will avail themselves of the opportunity of introducing him to many more of their friends than was possible during his brief stay in the Capital last spring.

Baker, who will leave at the end of the week for San Francisco, from where he will sail October 13 aboard the President Johnson for his new post.

Countess Szechenyi Is Entertained.

Countess Szechenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister to London, who has been in Chicago attending The Century of Progress Exposition, was entertained at luncheon on Monday by Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin at her home, Apple Green, in Lake Forest. The countess left after that day for a trip to the West Coast, having spent the summer with her mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, in Newport. Later she will sail to join Count Szechenyi in London.

Judge and Mrs Goodwin will come East the end of the week to meet their older son, Mr. McDonald Goodwin, who is returning after a year's study at Heidelberg. They will come to their apartment in the Mayflower shortly after his arrival.

Alfaro, who will accompany him to the Capital the following day. Dr. Arias will be a guest at the legation on New Hampshire avenue, where he made his home while serving here as Minister of Panama. At that time Dr. Alfaro was president of the Republic of Panama.

Mrs. Clarence Crittenden Calhoun entertained at luncheon yesterday, at Rossdhu Castle, in honor of Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Luncheon was served in the blue living room before a bright open fire. The table was decorated with autumn flowers. On each table was a black and silver flower pot filled with growing flowers, which were used as bridge prizes.

The guests included Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. Howard Sutherland, Mrs. David Hunt Blair, Mrs. Charles Kerr, Mrs. W. A. Gruman, Mrs. Livingston Brien, Mrs. Jessie W. Store Is Ready To Fit Us Out For Halloween

Entire Department Given Over to Costume for Young and Old.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

October means a lot more than merely the real beginning of fall. It means that Halloween is in the offing and all the little juniors around town are going to want pumpkin lanterns, masks and weird horns. And there'll be parties, grotesque decorations, costumes and trouble for all the fond parents if they fail to look around ahead of time and find out where all the various and sundry Halloween accoutrements may be bought.

One downtown store is opening up a separate department to care for this line of goods. It's almost as interesting as a wax museum to go and see the different kinds of regalia hanging around the room, the masks and wigs on the tables and the large poster prints of skeletons, black cats and witches on the walls.

It seems that the latest thing in ghost fashion this fall is a long, white voluminous paper robe that is guaranteed to rustle spookily. A cape with a pasteboard face fits over the head and changes an innocent looking cherub or a staid adult into a haunting figure.

Such a variety of costumes! And they come in all sizes for the grown-ups, or the kiddies! There's the gypsy girl and gypsy boy, Cossack, jockey, Dutch boy and girl, Mexican, Spanish, Uncle Sam, clown, Red Riding Hood, Cavalier, pirate, Mickey Mouse, harlequin, chorus girl and Pierrot and Pierrette. One of the nicest things about them is the price. They're $1 to $3.50.

No matter which outfit you may choose, there's a corresponding wig and masque. You'll find this a very intriguing department.

Some people say the ideal cruising weather is here right now, neither too hot nor too cool for comfort. Others who prefer the summer but are loath to relinquish the pastime will be swarming out these next half dozen week-ends to put the finishing touches to a cruising season.

If they were to drop by a Connecticut avenue shop they'd be particularly pleased with the "cruising cases" on display there. These are round black fabricoid boxes divided into separate compartments for hats and shoes and a large one for knit suits and dresses. It's easy to pack, easy to unpack, and lightweight enough to be handled easily.

It was a surprise to see such a delightful suit for $8.95. It had a lot of things that you'd never suspect in such a low-priced one. There's a decided style, an enviable fit, an altogether individual look about it.

The plain knit skirt speaks for itself. A blouse sweater with loose stitches forming the yoke and sleeves is the ideal complement. And the beret is the finishing touch. This suit may be bought in wine, brown or navy, in sizes 14 to 20.

Many a very pleasant room takes on a disgruntled appearance from the heterogeneous scattering of shoes, hose and bits of laundry which should be put away, but just aren't.

Perhaps there's no handy place to put them—is that it? Such a difficulty is solved by the combination laundry, hoisery and shoe bag on display in a downtown store. One of these will cost you exactly 39 cents.

The bargain wool sales lately have made us think we have an industrious winter ahead, but the new quilt packages thoroughly convince us. They're hard to resist. They offer all the intricacies of a Chinese puzzle and the color intrigue of the aurora borealis. They'll be useful and ornamental when they're finished.

The pieces of patch silk are cut already, just waiting to be sewn. You find them done up in a neatly wrapped celophane package. It might be a case of as you sew so shall you sleep.

If they aren't the ideal things for a small Christmas remembrance, they're the next best thing. Have you heard about them? Those little packages of note paper with steel cut die in the corners? You may have a choice of two kinds, either the white with blue borders and initials, or the grayish blue with no border.

There are 12 envelopes and 12 sheets of paper and the price is only 25 cents.

One enterprising housewife carefully kept tab of her marceling expenses for three months. She was aghast to find she had run up a bill of $24. Sometimes, after she had emerged from the hairdressing shop she would straightway encounter weather conditions that would take all the nice waves from her coiffure immediately and leave it as straight and wispy as before.

"This can't go on," she said to herself. "I must manage better." She thought and thought, but could arrive at no solution to her problem until she happened on the marceling irons in a G street store. They cost her very little and saved her much. Why don't you look into it?

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Nurse Mildred Penner had some pretty anxious moments over 3-year-old Mary (upper left), after Mary entered Children's Hospital August 25, suffering with pneumonia, and spent nearly two weeks in the oxygen chamber. But Mary's better now, as she demonstrates by eating every bit of her morning custard. Dr. Henry Rabnowitz (upper right) seems to be the man of the hour in the convalescent ward, what with 16-month-old Jimmie claiming his lap and 6-year old Blossom his attention for her doll. In the surgical ward (below) 10-year-old Elmer, in bed, receives morning visitors.

Correct Shade Of Powder Gives Beauty to Skin

Careful Application Lends Youthful Loveliness to Faded Complexions.

The right powder, properly applied, can give to the most unattractive skin an illusion of transparent peach bloom loveliness. Unwisely chosen, carelessly applied, it can deaden and defeat the beauty of the most exquisite natural complexion.

Four things must be considered in adapting powder to the individual: Its texture, shade, fragrance and method of application.

The oily skin requires a heavy powder. For a dry skin, a light weight powder must be chosen, unless care is taken to have the skin thoroughly and evenly anointed with a suitable creamy powder base. Heavy powder directly applied to the dry skin gives a scaly or chapped appearance.

As for colors, this season's return to fragile femininity demands a suggestion of pink-and-whiteness in complexions, regardless of the fact that milady may be disporting a heavy coating of sunburn as a vacation hangover.

Dark Powders "Out."

"The dark powders of the past few seasons, with their suggestion of sporting masculinity, are definitely 'out' of the winter fashion picture of 1933," a Washington make-up expert tells us.

Fortunately, there is a certain new shade of peach powder of medium weight, which happily blends with the darkest shade of natural sunburn to give it a creamy fairness. In seeming contradiction, when it is smoothed over the flat pallor of the graying or white-haired woman's skin, it brings up a youthful blush-rose tone. Viewed objectively this powder is a smooth, creamy color, overcast with a tinge of pink.

There are several ways of properly applying powder, to attain the soft, smooth, dull finish for which every woman strives. One is by the use of an eiderdown puff, made of finest "baby feathers." Because of its feathery texture, this puff actually brushes on the powder, instead of packing it into the pores.

Or, one may use the ordinary types of puffs; lambs wool or velour, if one remembers to apply the powder generously, with a very light touch, and brush it lightly and evenly afterward with a powder brush. These are procurable anywhere, in drug stores, department stores, or 5-and-10-cent stores.

Cotton Puffs Are Good.

Puffs of absorbent cotton are also to be recommended, especially for the woman suffering from acne, eczema or any skin infection or eruption. The cotton applies the powder lightly and each pad may be thrown away after one application, thus eliminating the possibility of reinfecting the skin.

American women have proved their preference for American made powders, principally on the ground of scent. French and other continental made powders usually have a heavy musk odor, dear to the Parisian woman, but often distasteful to the American. She seems to prefer the dainty, elusive, unnameable scent turned out by American manufacturers.

And fragrance of powder is a wise point for the wearer to consider. If she is unconsciously dissatisfied with the fragrance her powder emanates, she will suffer a concomitant loss of poise and self-approval.

Incidentally, smart women are learning that a wee tinge of orchid and a certain very light shade of bright pink, mixed with their powder for evening, lends a translucent loveliness to flesh shade under artificial light.

No Laughter Lurking

By Katherine W. Smith.

Deep behind the shadows etched
Around your eyes I see
No laughter lurking, though your lips
May smile. Your words can be

The lightest spoken, but your bright
And bitter mirth denies
The shadows—I would like to see
A smile within your eyes.

Healing Little Minds Is Big Task at Children's Hospital

After Youngsters' Bodies Mend, Healthy Outlook Must Be Restored, Worker Says, Telling of Girl 13, Who Shunned World After Illness.

Necessity of providing bedside instruction for convalescent children is one of the major problems confronting Children's Hospital.

It is quite as important, in the opinion of Superintendent Mattie Gibson, as the new $25,000 boiler plant now sought in a campaign, the lack of which may force the institution to close its doors.

"In healing the body, it is necessary to waken the child's mind to healthy thinking; to a desire to be up and doing; to a realization of his power to explore, to know, and to create," Miss Gibson said yesterday.

Self Pity is Fought.

Such instruction, which is provided only partially now through altruistic volunteer workers, would obviate three handicaps to the ill child's recovery, according to Miss Gibson. Always there is the necessity to prevent the sick child developing an egoistic self-pitying complex, as the result of becoming the center of a solicitous universe. Without mental interests, his mind may become passive to the extent that he loses the "will to live." And, thirdly, the eager student's recovery may be retarded seriously through worry over falling behind his classmates, due to illness.

Valuable work is being done for sick children in Childrens' Hospital by Mrs. Mary Weller, playground supervisor. Donor of a memorial garden to the institution, Mrs. Weller for 10 years has been leading convalescent children back to mental and physical vigor through arousing their interest in nature.

Saves Girl, 13, From Self.

She tells the story of a 13-year-old girl who became a recluse from life following an appendicitis operation. She refused food and visitors over a period of six months, drawing the sheet over her head when anyone approached her. Pitifully emaciated, given up to die by parents and physicians, she was turned over as a last resort to Mrs. Weller's ministrations.

Carrying a rose from the memorial garden, Mrs. Weller entered the child's room. Ignoring the patient, she sat down by the window, and, with colored paper and wire, seemingly lost herself in the entrancing occupation of fashioning a rose. She accompanied her work with an enthusiastic monologue about the activities of a bee, a spider and a fly about a rose bush out of doors.

The child—who had disdained every type of picture book, mechanical toy, and doll—lifted herself trembling from her pillow, extended bony arms, and quavered:

"Let me make a rose!"

Her recovery dated from that hour.

Before coming to Children's Hospital, Mrs. Weller had been for years a kindergarten instructor. This gentle-faced, white-haired, enthusiastic woman reveals marvelous understanding of the workings and the potential creative genius of the child-mind.

"So far as the child is concerned, occupation and education, to be helpful, must have in it the elements of discovery, opportunity for individual resourcefulness. When children discover within themselves the power to create," she said, corroborating what Superintendent Gibson said, "they have their feet on the road to healthy thinking, which is as important in regaining health as medicine and physical care.

"Nature is all healing. And all children respond to nature."

As she talked, Mrs. Weller tumbled forth the contents of box after box of artificial birds and flowers made by convalescent children. Their creative powers challenged through observation of nature, children had wrought the articles practically without instruction, she declared.

127 in Hospital Now.

Today there are 127 convalescent children in the hospital.

"By tonight there may be 150," Miss Gibson said. "The daily average is about 130. Some of them stay with us as long as five or six years, and the larger number are with us for two or three years. These children provide the problem of academic as well as recreational education."

The greatest problem is with colored children, for whom is provided no convalescent home. The majority of white children, when able to leave their beds—yet not ready to return to normal home life—go either to the Children's Country Home or to the Christ Child Farm, near Rockville. The former institution cares for children under 5 years of age and the latter receives children of primary school age and over. Here their occupational and educational needs are met, together with medical and nursing requirements.

Thirteen-year-old Wilbur, described by Miss Gibson as "a boy of rare intelligence," is one of these colored children.

"He keeps up with current events by reading the daily newspapers," Miss Gibson said. "He discusses world affairs, including the NRA, with as much intelligence as the average adult—maybe more.

Has Literary Taste.

"He has a discriminating taste in books. Last Christmas, when asked what he would like, he submitted a modest list of books that would have done credit to a scholar.

"When he came to us several years ago, suffering with tuberculosis, the world of books and people was an unknown world to him.

"With what instruction and opportunity to learn we have been able to provide him, his intellectual progress has been astounding. He has written a prize story and done wonderful things in handicraft. Tonight he is to speak on our radio broadcast, from the convalescent white ward. He is delighted at the prospect."

Wilbur wheeled himself about energetically in his reclining chair; showed the pig he is modeling in clay. It has to be done over, because yesterday it lost its ears, and looks a bit more like a bear than a porker. He thought it not quite so good a piece of work as the head of a man, modeled by his nurse.

"See what Malcolm's doing," he urged.

Ten-year-old Malcolm basked gratefully in the praise of his embroidered daisies. Elaine, 7, stole shy glances at the callers, as she hovered maternally over her brown-skinned doll. Carl, aged 5, has no wares to display. He hasn't felt like expressing himself yet.

Sweet Potato Recipe Winner Of Week's Prize

Mrs. Charles Leffler Awarded $5 for Her Timely Suggestion.

In the tuber food family the sweet potato holds an ancient and honorable place. Outside of its valuable food properties it has the added merit of appealing to the palate and adaptability to many types of treatment.

A new sweet potato recipe, therefore, is welcomed by all housewives and one entitled, "Sweet Potato and Nut Croquettes," by Mrs. Charles Leffler, of 3925 Jenifer street, Chevy Chase, D. C., wins the $5 prize for last week. Here it is:

3 pounds light colored sweet potatoes
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
¼ pound shelled pecans
Dash of nutmeg
1 egg
1 tablespoon milk
1½ cups fine cracker crumbs

Peel and boil sweet potatoes in water salted with teas salt. When done, mash and add tablespoon butter, ¼ pound pecans, cut up not too small, and dash of nutmeg. Let cool in icebox. When cold shape into small oblong croquettes and dip in beaten egg, adding 1 tablespoon milk to egg, then in cracker crumbs and fry in deep Crisco or lard. Especially nice to serve with fillet mignon or fillet of flounder.

Now that the lowly sweet potato and nuts are coming into the markets very new and fresh, it is a welcome change to the ordinary sweet potato croquette. All ingredients can be purchased at Sanitary Stores.

Eraser a Savior To Soiled Gloves

White of Egg Advised for Fawn Kid.

White and all light-colored gloves can be cleaned in a few minutes with the use of a sponge eraser, procurable at any stationer's store.

Place the gloves on the hands, smooth them flat and creaseless. Beginning at the fingertips, rub the eraser over the gloves with a strong, stroking motion, working down to the cuff. If you have done your work thoroughly, the gloves should look like new when you have finished.

Fawn kid gloves can be cleaned with white of egg. If using eggs for cooking, the little bit left in the shell is sufficient. Just wipe evenly with a soft cloth. The result should be gratifying.

Tea Leaves Make Mirrors Sparkle

Have you tried the tea-leaves method of cleaning varnished surfaces, window panes and mirrors? The results are more than pleasing.

Save all your tea leaves for a few days. Put them in a pail to which has been added a pint of hot water. Let stand for half an hour. Strain through a sieve, and use the liquid for washing. The cleansing properties of the tea are such that little elbow motion is required.

The tea-leaves bath is splendid for window sashes and oil cloths. It seems to have a magic effect in cleaning any varnished or polished surface.

Walter Cummings Leases Residence

Treasury Official Takes Over Long Home.

The Executive Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Walter Cummings have leased the Sixteenth street home of the former Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Cummings have been making their home at the Carlton since their arrival here in the spring. Mrs. Cummings and their sons recently returned from Europe, where they spent several weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry Merle Spillman, who spent the summer touring France and the British Isles, arrived in New York on the Georgic, and will return to Washington this week to open their apartment at the Westchester.

Mrs. Newton Lord Nichols, wife of Commander Nichols, and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Hyland Nichols, who have spent the past three months on the French and Italian Riviera and in Switzerland, have arrived in Paris. Mrs. Nichols and her daughter, who are accompanied by Mrs. Nichols' brother, Mr. J. Hyland Kuhns, of Baltimore, expect to divide the time during the next two months between the continent and England, prior to returning to the United States to rejoin Commander Nichols, who is stationed on the West Coast as executive officer of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania.

Dr. and Mrs. Ulysses G. B. Pierce will be the guests of honor at a reception at All Souls' Church (Unitarian), Sixteenth and Harvard streets, on Friday evening. Mr. W. A. Wheeler, chairman of the board of trustees, will assist in the receiving line. The reception is being arranged by members of the church activities committee, of which Mrs. D. Priscilla Edgerton is chairman.

Lieut. Corley McDarment, of Rodgers Field, Pittsburgh, will be in the city for several days and is at the Willard Hotel.

Serve Sandwiches To Replace Cakes

Appetizing Fillings Tempt Guests to Tea Table.

Sandwiches in place of cakes are often a welcome change for afternoon tea.

Chicken, ham, or any kind of cold meat, sliced rather thin, or chopped fine and seasoned with salt, pepper and mustard, make excellent fillings.

Other fillers may include eggs, hard boiled and made into a paste, using a little butter, pepper and salt, and a touch of chopped parsley or young lettuce; cucumbers, thinly sliced with a little white pepper sprinkled on top; shrimp, made into a paste with butter, pepper and salt; avocado pears, sliced thin and sprinkled with white pepper; and peanuts, minced and pounded into a pulp, with butter, pepper and salt as seasoning.

The Family Marketer

Asparagus Becomes Monarch of the Market at 50 Cents a Bunch.

A person who "covers" the vegetable market every day soon learns to see many things there which the casual observer isn't likely to notice. She finds out after awhile that beans, peas, carrots and even turnips can be very expressive. They may not sit up and clap their hands, nor hang their heads and weep, but they lie there in neat little piles and run the gamut of emotions.

The asparagus this morning is wearing a smirk. The Savoy cabbage is looking envious. The avocados are quite placid. The broccoli greens are staring with wide-open eyes and the carrots are sulking in bunches.

There's a very excellent reason back of it all. The asparagus has come all the way from California and feels quite cosmopolitan at this point. "We may have been just common ordinary stalks out there," they seem to say, "but we're real aristocrats out here." And it continues to smirk away under a sign reading "50 cents a bunch."

The Savoy cabbage is dark green with envy. If you listened closely and used your imagination you could hear them whispering among themselves: "Here we got all curled up for the occasion and we're being outclassed. Ten cents a pound for our beautiful heads! Imagine!"

The broccoli greens undoubtedly are frightened. Their stalks made their market debut several years ago, but the little greens stayed at home and liked it. Now here they are, not knowing quite what to do about it. People aren't buying them, not many of them, anyway, and they just sit and wonder if 10 cents a pound isn't a little high.

The avocados can afford to be placid. They realize that prices affect them very little.

"It doesn't matter how the wholesalers squabble and push our price up or down, we always retail for about the same. It just goes to show you can't keep a good man down," they're thinking.

It was hard to understand why the carrots were sulking. But it finally came out. Those from Texas have left the market and the ones from California are being rushed in before some of them feel they're ready. So they sulk. And so do the marketers when they see how the prices have gone up. Two bunches for 19 cents.

The mustard greens and the kale are at swords points. The mustards made a catty remark about what a pity it was the kale cost only 5 cents a pound. The kale said they'd rather sell for less than they were worth than be hypercritical for 5 cents more, like some greens they knew. So the mustards said they'd prefer not to be placed in the same line with kale, but the kale declared they wouldn't move for anybody. As a consequence, all the dealers had to rearrange their stalls and separate the mustards and the kale.

But all was quiet on the poultry front. The chickens and ducks had their last say in the barnyard. They cackled together for a long time, for the ducks said it was an insult to come into town and sell for 25 cents a pound like a stewing chicken.

The young broilers and fryers puffed their feathers out and said it was quality people wanted and that they were willing to pay 30 cents a pound for it. So that decided the matter.

Wycherley.

Successful authors, in these times, abide in Easy street; they have an ample store of dimes, and wholesome pies to eat. When Wycherley lived out his life, art was a rotten game; his comedy, "The Country Wife," achieved a deathless fame. He made a hit and for a time he was the great "I Am," and he was praised in prose and rhyme, in quip and epigram. He was the playmate of the king for quite a little while, and everything he said would bring to royal lips a smile. He chummed around with belted earls and dukes and kindred guys; he was pursued by titled girls with love-light in their eyes. It seemed his future was secure, without a wormwood cup; and of his present he was sure that it was right side up. He loaned his money left and right, as every kind man lends, and often sat up half the night to entertain his friends. Arrested for a trifling debt he went to Newgate jail, and legends of his ordeal yet in dismal books prevail. The refuse of the London slums was congregated there; and murderers and thieves and bums were round him everywhere. Amid the squalor and the stench he spent his frightful weeks, the jest of highwayman and wench and all abandoned freaks. We talk about the good old days, the golden days gone by; we see them through a pleasant haze that tricks the dreaming eye.

Film Stars Rebel at Code Hearing Representation—National Books a New Hit

26 Players in Revolt Over a Salary Matter

To Form "Actors' Guild"; Frances Fuller Coming; About Showshops.

All, it seems, is not well with Hollywood and the NRA code hearings being held in the National Capital.

According to wire advices from the West Coast, 26 motion picture players, voicing keen dissatisfaction with their representation at the NRA hearings in Washington, yesterday banded together and protested to a deputy recovery administrator against formation of a "salary control board."

Fourteen of the film players, in what is described as a wholesale walkout, resigned from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, saying they were not satisfied with the manner in which the Academy represented them at the hearings on the proposed code. Twelve other stellar players, nonmembers of the organization, joined them in the protest.

Under the leadership of Frank Morgan, the 26 protestants began forming a screen players' guild, open to all film actors, to combat sections of the producers' code deemed objectionable by the actors and to fight the proposed formation of a salary control board.

A Notable List.

The academy members who telegraphed their resignations are: Adolphe Menjou, chairman of the actors' branch; Frederic March, first vice president of the organization; Ken Thomson, Paul Muni, Chester Morris, George Bancroft, James Cagney, Boris Karloff, Warren William, Robert Montgomery, Frank Morgan, Gary Cooper, Ralph Bellamy and George Raft.

Those joining the 14 in signing the telegram to Sol. A. Rosenblatt, deputy recovery administrator in charge of the motion picture code, are: Ann Harding, Otto Kruger, Eddie Cantor, Charles Butterworth, Zeppo, Chico, Harpo and Groucho Marx, Ralph Morgan, Lee Tracy, Spencer Tracy, and Miriam Hopkins.

Question Ethics.

Code provisions to which the actors object, they explained, are the articles dealing with the ethics of relations between artists' agents and their clients, and the "producers' agreement," under which the producers agree not to employ each others' actors without due notice.

Even with these seemingly mass defections, it is still a fair assumption that the academy will survive since it has 319 actor members remaining, 216 of whom are active.

Loew's Fox and Palace Theaters in this city make the modest boast that they are providing Washington's baseball fans with "complete coverage" of the world series games being played in New York. Not only are details of the games being announced through the public address systems during the progress of the play on the diamond at the Polo Grounds, but immediately upon the conclusion of the first game, so disappointing to Washington in its final result, motion pictures were rushed through the laboratories and shipped down by plane to be ready for local exhibition begining this morning. There may be something in City Manager Carter Barron's boast, at that.

Up in the Air!

Another noontime preview in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday revealed to the dramatic desks — most of whom were still groggy from the Lenore Ulric first night and the later anticipatory dedication of Pete Macias' new Heigh Ho Club, formally opened to the general public last night—the harrowing footages of "Night Flight," the multi-starred feature opening at Loew's Palace on Friday.

"Night Flight" seems to these fallible eyes to be slightly behind schedule as a timely exposition of the manifold advantages and the terrifying hazards of night flying over terrain that is little known and amid climatic conditions that no one seems able to guess. The action is laid in, and the story throughout its length deals with, South America and the institution of night flying as an aid to intercontinental communication, mercantile interchange and health conservation among the nations.

"Stormy Weather."

They were having a fine run of cyclones about the time the picture was taken and getting over the Andes was pretty tough. Some of the boys made it, though. Others of them were carried out to sea and bailed out into an angry sea to drown rather than crack up. Personally, we are able to detect slight advantage in the one over the other.

An amazing number of stars of the first flight—begging your pardon—appear in the various disjointed sequences, but each has surprisingly little to do in the way of carrying forward any sort of sustained narrative.

If you like airplanes, however, this should be your dish. "Night Flight" is continuously alive with them. And they have got noisy motors!

Jane Morley, the psychic, who on last June 29 predicted that the Nationals would win the pennant in the American League, arrives in town at 4:55 o'clock this afternoon to fulfill a return engagement at Walter Von Herbulis' Club Michel and, incidentally, to occupy a seat in Clark Griffith's box at the first world series game played in Washington. She will open at the Club Michel tonight. Miss Morley also, I believe, has committed herself to the statement that the Nationals are to win the series from the Giants—a conviction from which it is to be hoped she has not been deflected by yesterday's mild catastrophe.

Lohengrin and Rice.

Wedding announcements from the parents of the bride, of course, have something to do with its having leaked out, but only now is it becoming known that Lou Brown, director of advertising and publicity for the Loew theaters in Washington, while on a recent quiet vacation trip, took unto himself, as the saying goes, a bride.

On Wednesday, August 30, one learns, Miss Helen Lillian Chrul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Chrul, were married in Elizabeth City, N. C. All this happened when Mr. Brown was ostensibly vacationing in solitary grandeur at Virginia Beach. Miss Chrul, whose home is in Baltimore—or rather, was in Baltimore—was also at the beach at the time, and it is only a step, so to speak, to Elizabeth City. And there you are. Or there they were, and that is about all there is to it.

All, that is, except that Mr. and Mrs. Brown are at home at Sedgwick Gardens, 3726 Connecticut avenue, where they are belatedly being showered with the congratulations and best wishes of their many friends in the Capital.

Obviously, there has been some slight confusion in the matter of what should have been Mr. Brown's chosen profession. Instead of being a publicity man, he evidently should have belonged to the Secret Service!

After the results of Monday's balloting in Hyattsville, Md., were tabulated it was found that the advocates of Sunday movies have scored a decisive victory, outvoting their opponents by an easy 2 to 1. The same question comes to a vote in Mount Rainier on Saturday, October 21, and it is confidently expected that the same public choice will be registered there. Later in the year the issue is expected to be raised in other Maryland cities where Sabbath motion picture entertainment now is banned. Bad year for prohibitory legislation!

Another Hit Coming.

While the National Theater up to time of writing has no attraction booked for next week, an attraction of especial interest to the Capital is scheduled for the week beginning Monday, October 16.

This date will bring to the local stage a play now known by the name of "Her Master's Voice," which was formerly known as "Only With You" and which already has received flattering notices in Wilmington, Del., where it opened last Saturday night, and Philadelphia, where it is now playing.

Frances Fuller in Cast.

In the cast are Roland Young, Laura Hope Crews and Washington's own—or very nearly own—Frances Fuller. All of these gifted players have only been seen recently on the screen—Mr. Young in a long list of successes, including several of Ernst Lubitsch's most engaging comedies; Miss Crews in "The Silver Chord," and Miss Fuller most recently of all in "One Sunday Afternoon."

"Her Master's Voice" is a Max Gordon production, it being Mr. Gordon who last season gave us Lynn Fontanne, Alfred Lunt and Noel Coward in Mr. Coward's "Design for Living"—revived as the first of the National's guest-star productions this fall. The play will be eagerly awaited as a possible duplication of Miss Ulric's current success in "Her Man of Wax."

There is still every likelihood, by the way, that Mr. Gordon and Manager Stephen E. Cochran of the National will still conspire to send Corinne Griffith on the road in "Design for Living," her engagement here in the play having convinced both entrepreneurs that there is gold in that thar bill!

Cheer up, that pitching staff can't all be Hubbells!

Local Premiere Is Set Ahead

Paul Robeson, as he appears in United Artists' picturization of Eugene O'Neill's tragedy of terror, "The Emperor Jones," which will inaugurate its engagement at RKO-Keith's today, instead of Friday, as originally announced.

Hearing on Gas Plant Valuation Believed Near

Commission Won't Wait for Vacancy to Be Filled.

The long-delayed Public Utilities Commission hearing on valuation of the Washington Gas Light Co. properties probably will be held before the end of this month, whether or not the vacancy on the commission is filled.

Riley E. Elgen, acting chairman of the commission, will have to conduct most of the hearing, as Engineer Commissioner Gotwals has not the time to sit at a prolonged hearing.

The commission is expected to reach a decision as to its course tomorrow.

Wrong Taxi

Man Astonished When Taken to Police Station.

Walter Nickens, 32, colored, of 624 Gordon avenue northeast, will look twice before he hails another taxicab, he said at Police Court yesterday.

At Sixth and H streets northeast he hailed a car and instructed the two men liveried in blue to drive him to his home.

When the car drew up in front of Ninth Precinct Station Nickens protested loudly. Officer F. H. Huffman told him to look closely at the car. It was a Ninth Precinct radio police vehicle.

Nickens was released on his personal bond by Judge Gus A. Schuldt on a charge of intoxication.

Orphans Will See Circus Matinee

The Post Provides Treat for Children Today.

The Washington Post will furnish another bright spot in the lives of District of Columbia orphans today. The Post will be host to children from St. Joseph's Orphanage at Hunt's Circus.

The Rotary Club will provide transportatoin for about 60 children to the afternoon performance at Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

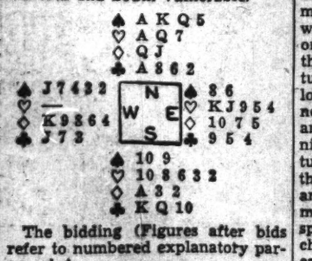
As the circus changes its location daily during its eight-day stand in the District of Columbia, The Post has as its guests at the matinee performances children from orphanages nearest the circus grounds.

Culbertson on Bridge

A Difficult Trump Situation.

When the Declarer finds that one opponent has five trumps to the King-Knave-nine banked over the Ace-Queen-seven in Dummy and also that he must lose a trick in a plain suit, he can not be blamed for congratulating himself if he succeeds in making a contract of four-odd. Naturally, a contract such as this probably is not the ideal one in the combined hands. There is quite likely a safer road to game, and in the example given below a notrump contract would have been more logical and correct. However, bidding is only a prediction of the tricks obtainable in actual play and no player can be expected to be letter-perfect in the prediction he makes as to adverse distribution of a suit when his opponents refuse to aid him with any information, not even that of a penalty double of a contract they expect to defeat. The hand which called forth this comment is:

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs):

North	East	South	West
2NT(1)	Pass	3♡(2)	Pass
4♡(3)	Pass(4)	Pass	Pass

1—North has a very fine hand, but I would prefer a bid of one spade. Certainly it is not strong enough for a bid of two notrump.

2—South probably would be wiser to raise the two notrump bid to three, and, as is obvious, this contract is easily made against any Opening lead whatever. In fact, against East's most natural lead—a small heart—five-odd will quite likely be made. However, South felt that he played the cards better than his partner and, after all, his bid offered a choice between a game contract in hearts and one in notrump. Thus the bid on the greatly shaded suit is explained if not justified.

3—With only a doubleton diamond, the raise to game in hearts is quite obvious.

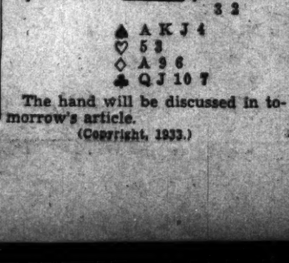
4—The only reason, as East afterward explained, that he did not double was that he did not wish to disclose the trump situation as he felt sure that high honors in the trump suit were in the Dummy. A Double would not be such a bad gamble by a nonvulnerable player as apparently he has 3 tricks in the trump suit and thus his partner is required to take but one.

West's Opening lead was the spade 3, which the Declarer won in the Dummy with the Queen. Intending to immediately test out the trump situation, he then led a low club, won the trick in his own hand with the King and laid down the deuce of hearts. When West failed to follow suit he played the Ace, realizing that he had a difficult situation confronting him if he was to fulfill his contract. He knew that West held at least four spades, and probably five, so the problem that presented itself concretely was to cash the top tricks before East had an opportunity to discard, and then seek to make a small trump or two in his own hand before eventually forcing East into an end-play situation which must permit the heart Queen in Dummy to win. Therefore, he now led a second round of clubs, winning with the Queen in his own hand, and returned the suit. When East followed suit he breathed easier. He next played the Queen of diamonds and permitted it to hold, West winning with the King. West now returned a spade, which was won in the Dummy and a spade returned and trumped, East discarding a diamond. This really was in effect a species of Grand Coup, as the spade chosen for trumping was the high card of the suit. The Dummy was reentered by the return of a low diamond. Now the last club in Dummy was led and East, of course, was forced to trump. He played the Knave, shutting out the South hand, but thereafter could win but one more trump trick—namely, his King.

Tomorrow's Hand.

How far should East and West go in defending against a game bid by North and South on the hand below?

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THE fans are starting to howl about the Marine Band's absence from WMAL's morning broadcasting.

That's why WMAL wants the Taylor Branson musicians back on the airwaves as soon as possible . . . the sooner the better . . . not later than the middle of the month.

With the exception of WJSV's Elder Michaux, Branson probably gets more fan mail than any other Washington broadcaster.

The fans don't care if he was removed to make way for the Walter Damrosch music appreciation. They want Branson.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Chase and Sanborn, 8 p. m.; Ipana Troubadours, 9 p. m.; Marvelous Melodies, 10:30 p. m. WMAL—Russian Symphonic Choir, 9 p. m.; Roosevelt-Cardinal Hayes address, 9:30 p. m.; Jack Denny's Orchestra, 11:30 p. m. WJSV—Irvin Cobb, 9 p. m.; Ruth Etting, 9:15 p. m.; Roosevelt address, 9:30 p. m. WOL—Melody Stroller, 9 p. m.; Modern Arabian Nights, 9:30 p. m.; Rigoletto—Chicago Opera Co., 10 p. m.

Ed Wynn's broadcasters want to look over WOL's Washington talent. They haven't got around to where they are ready to audition some of the local shows the station has been airing for several years. But they have asked for names of the better talent.

Shows to be included are Central Union Mission Glee Club, Northern Dramatic Company and Washington Catholic Hour. The list will be submitted without comment from WOL bosses.

N. B. C. will try to broadcast Dr. Hugo Eckner and Dr. Max Jordan from the Graf Zeppelin, en route from Friedrichshafen to Chicago late this month.

Just when N. B. C. studio hands here were getting so they knew where to find Wednesday's Manhattan Revue Show, some one switched it to WMAL again. It's still on the 6:45 spot tonight.

WMAL will turn a microphone over to Administrator Henry Morgenthau for a "Farm Credit Projects" speech tonight at 10:30 o'clock.

Residents in the vicinity of National City Christian Church probably will want to know why its carillon chimed about 11 o'clock last night.

It was WJSV keeping track of contributions to the Children's Hospital furnace fund. One note means $1, another $2, and so on. The chiming was radioed by remote control.

Boys and girls in the hospital and their nurses will make their own appeal for money this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, with the aid of Announcer Larry Elliott.

Elder Michaux's stirring things up for the hospital in his own way.

A Washington auto dealer has hit upon the idea of celebrating his twenty-ninth year in business on the Pageant of Melody Show, WRC Thursday at 6:30 p. m.

A Roosevelt speech at the dedication of the Samuel Gompers Memorial on Massachusetts avenue Saturday is to be radioed by WJSV between 10:30 and 11:30 a. m. WJSV has been assured the President will be there.

Columbia is looking for big things from Actor Hal K. Dawson ("Another Language") in a play series, starting October 10, at 8 p. m., on a three-shows-a-week schedule

N. B. C. gives the medicine men a lot of microphone time next week.

Findings of the St. Louis sleeping-sickness investigation will be reported by Dr. James P. Leake, senior U. S. Public Health Service surgeon, to the American Public Health Association and N. B. C listeners Monday at 5 p. m.

At 3:15 the same afternoon one-time University of Michigan President Clarence Cook Little radios "The Economic Bearing of Cancer on the Individual, the Family and the State," the first of 10 daily medical broadcasts N. B. C. has scheduled in connection with the International Congress of Surgery in Chicago.

National Student Federation of America renews radio relations with Columbia October 12 with "Revolt in Asia," by A. Fenner Brockway, British Independent Labor Party chairman, in this country to lecture for the League for Industrial Democracy.

Irene Rich (left), looking very much as she did the day she made her first movie, makes her debut with a full-time air show on an N. B. C. network tonight. Trade and Mark are Billy Hillpot and Scrappy Lambert without those whiskers. The waves carry them Tuesday nights at 8:45.

Marital Policy Up in Schools

Board Acts Today About Teachers' Status in District.

Adoption of a future policy on the "married persons" problem in the District school system will be the principal item of business before the school board today.

On adoption of the economy act, school officials established a policy in conformity with its provisions on married persons in Government service. As a result about 18 teachers resigned to avoid jeopardizing their husbands' jobs with the Federal Government, though it had been consistently contended that teachers, not being classified civil service employes, were not within provisions of the act.

Recently several teachers who left their jobs asked for reinstatement, and their applications now are before the board.

A special committee, headed by Henry I. Quinn, with Dr. J. Hayden Johnson and Mrs. Henry G. Doyle as members, has been studying the problem, and it is expected to make policy recommendations.

Roosevelt Felicitates King of Bulgaria

President Roosevelt yesterday sent a telegram of congratulation to Boris III, King of the Bulgarians, on the anniversary of his accession to the throne on October 3, 1918.

"On behalf of my fellow countrymen and in my own name," the President's message said, "I extend to your majesty hearty congratulations on this anniversary of your accession, to the throne of Bulgaria and the assurances of my high regard and best wishes."

No. 55820. London Guarantee Co

Stocks Climb Fraction on Quiet Trading

Metals and Motors Aid in Rise; Turnover Is 931,910 Shares.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Markets were uniformly colorless today. Stock trading was even duller than on Monday, although the averages managed to squeeze out a small net gain.

On the stock exchange, traders kept an eye on the ball game during the afternoon and took more interest in the Polo Grounds proceedings than in the market.

Metal and motors had a fair morning, which gave some tone to other industrials, but rails and utilities—particularly the former—lagged. Turnover was only 931,910 shares.

Outside Influence Lacking.

Outside influences were lacking. Dollar exchange firmed slightly against gold currencies, while sterling sagged in its relationship to the French franc coincident with a record high for gold in London's free market.

Chrysler, with a 2 point rise, and General Motors, up a major fraction net, moved rather actively. American smelting 7 per cent preferred jumped nearly 6 points when the directors voted a $1.75 dividend payment on account of arrears; the second preferred also rallied.

U. S. Smelting, Homestake, McIntyre and Dome boosted their levels, but all gains were not fully maintained. Doubtless the London gold price had something to do with their performance. U. S. Steel lifted more than a point and the recently heavy American Telephone was up 1. Santa Fe lost nearly 2, while Union Pacific was off 1½ at one time, making full recovery later. Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum, and Standard of Kansas fell back, but Texas, Seaboard Oil and California Standard worked higher. Allied Chemical was down more than 2.

Near July Lows.

Although trading was too dull to give much significance to price changes, the market, by closing higher on the average, again hardened around the July lows, just as it had done last week.

Some traders, however, would have been more impressed had the rails been stronger, although the industrials acted reasonably well. Brokerage house sentiment remained in a state of confusion.

"American Metal Market" finds "very little" buying of steel, although specifications against old contracts still maintain the production rate. "Strikes and fear of strikes," says this review, "have been a restrictive influence" on purchasing. It is still uncertain, the publisher believes, whether the next change for the industry will be upward because of seasonal betterment of demand or downward because of further depletion of old orders.

Financial circles were much interested in the opposition to currency inflation expressed by President Green of the Labor Federation. This support for the "honest dollar" cause was seen in some circles as a possible counterbalance to the demands for monetary expansion which have been sounded elsewhere, particularly in agricultural districts. Meanwhile, whether President Roosevelt's next public address would broach the subject of the currency remained a question of wide interest.

Must Work to Stabilization

Conditions Caused by Recent Policies Make Task Facing Us Difficult

By Ralph West Robey.

Within the last three weeks there has been a noticeable increase in the demand that immediate steps be taken to stabilize our currency. It is held that the present uncertainty is holding back a possible fall improvement in business. Further, it is apparent from the recent behavior of security and commodity prices, in the face of the decline of the dollar, that the public no longer rushes in to buy as a result of currency depreciation. All of this is true. At the same time stabilization involves such dangers that it is doubtful if it should be done without careful and lengthy preparation of the field.

These dangers arise from the situation which has been created by the forces set in motion by our currency policies of the last six months. That there would be such forces, and that they would cause difficulties when the question of returning to gold finally arrived, has been clear from the first. They were, in fact, among the principal reasons for not pursuing a policy of currency depreciation and inflation. It is too late now, however, to discuss the wisdom of the move. Today the important problem is to adopt some new course that will remove the present uncertainties with the least possible disturbance.

Two Broad Fields of Danger Involved in Stabilization.

In broadest terms, it may be said that the danger from immediate stabilization lies in two fields. The first of these is the price level. As a result of the threat of inflation—with the statement of the President that he would even turn to the printing presses if necessary in order to get a reasonable price level—there has been an immense amount of commodity and security hoarding in this country since March. This has extended all the way from large speculators and investors down through the ranks to the wage-earner, who has stocked his pantry for fear that by the following week everything would cost more.

Because of this, an immense amount of artificiality has been injected into our price structure. Values have been written up, not on the basis of costs and recurrent demand, but on the basis of how much our money might depreciate in the immediate future. We have had, in other words, the wholesale creation of inflated values—values that could be maintained only if the currency did depreciate as much as anticipated, and if enough purchasing power was created to take the goods at the higher values. This condition will continue as long as there is the danger of inflation, for it is a distinguishing earmark of all inflations. It is a problem, accordingly, which, in time, must be faced, and the only question is how it may be done with the least disturbance.

Immediate Stabilization Would Cause Huge Capital Movements.

The second broad field of danger, from the point of view of sudden stabilization without preparatory work, is capital movements between countries. It is estimated that perhaps as much as $2,000,000,000 has fled from the United States to the assumed greater safety of other countries. A large part of this will come back to this country, if it is permitted, as soon as our currency is stabilized. In addition, large sums of foreigners will tend to flow here if our policy becomes one in which investors can have confidence.

Were we to stabilize at once, therefore, and in a way which was accepted as final by investors, foreign countries would be subjected to terrific pressure from the attempt to get funds transferred from them to the United States. These countries, necessarily, would try to protect themselves. The result would be that they would place all kinds of embargoes against us and would fight to the best of their ability to prevent our policy from having the normal depressing effect upon their economies.

Obviously neither the collapse of our own price level nor intensified opposition by foreign nations is a contingency which can be looked upon with favor. Unfortunately, however, both are problems which we have to face, and we gain nothing from delaying the start of positive steps in their solutions. On the contrary, such delay involves a distinct loss because continuation of our present drifting is endangering all of the gains in employment and trade of the last six months.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A sharp setback in rubber shares was the feature on the stock exchange today and was caused by the less favorable reports regarding restrictions. South African gold mining shares were higher following the rise in the price of bar gold, which touched a new high record. Argentine rails again declined and transatlantic issues were lower following weakness in Wall street. The closing was quiet.

Paris—Uncertainties regarding the dollar and the weakness in the Wall street market forced values lower on the bourse, with the exception of rentes, which improved. The closing tone was heavy.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse was dull today. The market closed weak, being influenced by the unfavorable dollar fluctuation and unencouraging export prospects.

Federal Bonds Fail to Halt Market's Sag

Active Rails Join Declines as Trading Rises to $7,858,000.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The firmness of United States Government securities, apparently reflecting the subsidence of currency inflation sentiment, as virtually the only feature today in a generally dull and irregular bond market.

While the sales total advanced slightly to $7,858,000, par value, it was still around the low 1933 aggregate for a full day's session.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues again sagged 3-10 of a point.

Active Rail Declines.

In the more active rails declines of fractions to a point or more were suffered by some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Central Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Cleveland Union Terminal, Denver & Rio Grande, N. Y. Central, Cuba Railway, Iron Mountain, Southern Pacific, Southern and Wabash. Canadian carrier loans were moderately firm, as were some bonds of Erie, Pennsylvania, Pere Marquette and Western Pacific.

The exceptionally thin market accounted for some wide swings in several maturities. Pressed Steel Car 5s jumped 10 points on the sale of 11 bonds, and Ohio Public Service 7½s gained 3½ on the transfer of 7.

Columbia Gas Drops.

Columbia Gas 5s dropped 2⅛ points and losers of smaller amounts included loans of American & Foreign Power, Dodge Brothers, Laclede Gas, Western Union and Youngstown Sheet & Tube. Among the firm spots in the utility and industrial groups were bonds of International Hydro-Electric, North American, Shell Union Oil, and Warner Bros.

The Federal list, while not unusually active, registered gain of one-thirty-second to seven thirty-seconds of a point. Liberty Fourth 4¼s were in the greatest demand.

Swedish Kingdom 5½s were the liveliest of the foreign section, with a spurt of 5½ points. Swiss Government 5½s gained 2⅞ and Berlin loans were about a point higher. The sale of three Buenos Aires 6s of 1960 brought a loss of 14⅛ points, and bonds of the French government and Dutch East Indies lost a point or more.

Railway Company Lays Rails to Virginia Mine

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 3 (Spl.). Some idea of the importance the coal trade is assuming in the nearby territory is shown by the Western Maryland Railway Co. in expending about $40,000 for the installation of trackage leading to what is known as Hickory Lick, near Parsons, W. Va., where W. R. Mines is opening a new mine which he expects to produce heavily.

As many as five engines are used to haul one coal train of 100 cars on the mountain grades on the Western Maryland.

U. S. Whisky Syndicates Import Scotch Liquor

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Five million gallons of Scotch whisky are reported to have been purchased for the United States in anticipation of the repeal of prohibition.

The most recent transaction reported is the purchase by a United States syndicate of 500,000 gallons of the spirit through a well-known Glasgow firm of whisky brokers for approximately $1,250,000. This brings the total purchases by various United States syndicates to 5,000,000 gallons in the past five months.

U. S. Dollar Turns Steady on Markets

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—While the British pound sterling dropped to a new low level in terms of the French gold franc, the American dollar steadied today in foreign exchange markets.

With the pound selling at a rate of 78.65 francs, the English currency, computed in terms of gold dollars, was worth only about $3.08. The decline of the pound coincided with a new high price for bar gold in London of 134 shillings, 8 pence.

Before the opening of trading here, the dollar was heavy abroad in terms of the franc and other leading European exchanges. It rallied in New York, however, and at the close the French franc was unchanged at 6.08 cents, Belgian belgas were off .01 of a cent at 21.65 cents and Dutch guilders and Swiss francs were, at their final quotations of yesterday. Sterling, on the other hand, at $4.78½ for cables, was up ¼ of a cent on the dollar. The Scandinavians, Canadian dollars and Japanese yen were slightly higher.

Wool Market.

Boston, Oct. 3 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Wool is moving rather slowly in the Boston market, but prices are very firm. A further advance has been realized on strictly combing 56s, ¾-blood Ohio and similar wool at 41@42 in the grease. French combing staple graded Texas wool has been sold at 80@82, scoured basis. Average twelve months Texas wool in original bags sell moderately at 77@80 scoured basis. Good to choice twelve months Texas wool was sold at a price estimated at 82@83 scoured basis.

Curb's Prices Change Little In Dull Session

Irregular Trading Marks Heavier Turnover of 190,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Dull and listless trading marked the curb session today. The list closed narrowly irregular after quietly backing and filling over a restricted area. Aside from a few specialties and inactives, most price changes were unimportant.

Hiram Walker gained 1½ points, while General Tire & Rubber and Celanese first preferred advanced around 2 each. Parker Rust Proof and Great Atlantic & Pacific slipped around 4 points in inactive dealings; while Aluminum Co. of America and New York Shipbuilding were also reactionary.

Fractional changes marked utilities, metals and oils. Electric Bond & Share, Newmont and Humble Oils finished slightly higher, while American Light & Traction, New Jersey Zinc and Standard Oil of Kenutcky eased a trifle. Gulf Oil lost a point.

Transfers approximated 190,000 shares, compared with 164,000 for yesterday.

Gold Reaches New High on London Mart

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—The rise in the London price of gold to a new high at 134 shillings and 8 pence an ounce was explained in foreign exchange quarters here as reflecting both a further sag in the gold equivalent of the British currency, and a continued demand for metal by European continentals, presumably for hoarding purposes.

In terms of the French gold franc, the pound sterling has slipped today to a new low, which converted to gold dollars, was close to $3.08, compared to its old parity of $4.86⅝. Furthermore, gold has for some time been commanding a price in London a few pence above the price indicated by the level of the pound sterling in terms of the gold franc, or a premium above Paris.

This premium is interpreted in foreign exchange quarters as reflecting a desire on the part of continental Europeans to hoard metal, and their preference for London as the market in which to do it. They evidently feel that their operations can be kept secret in the free gold market of London, while buying in Paris might eventually bring some antihoarding action on their hands.

The new high in the price of gold in London, while the price, $32.12 an ounce set by the U. S. Treasury today is somewhat under the recent peak in this country, reflects a somewhat stronger dollar than that of a few weeks ago.

The American equivalent of today's gold price in London, based on the opening exchange at New York of $4.79¼ cents to the pound, would be $32.28 per fine ounce.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Retail trade—Reports gathered by merchantile agencies indicate that retail business in many sections of the country during the last week in September resumed the upward curve, which had flattened early in the month.

Structural steel—Awards of fabricated material for the country as a whole last week are estimated at 27,000 tons against 12,000 tons in the preceding week. Awards for the year to date are still below those for the corresponding period of 1932.

Cotton—The trade hears that goods manufacturers have started a campaign for heavy import levies on burlap to discourage the large use of the product in the bag trade in competition with cotton.

Tin—World's visible supply declined 3,372 tons last month to 30,162 tons. American deliveries during the month were 5,105 tons.

Richland Apple Cannery Opens in Waynesboro

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—The plant of the Richmond Apple Corporation, which has been closed here for several months will reopen this week, according to an announcement made by James Craig, manager. Former employes will be given preference in employment while a number of other local people will be given jobs.

The closing of the plant came as the result of a shortage of the York Imperial apple, which is used exclusively by the concern in their canned products. Mr. Craig stated that his files were crowded with unfilled orders and with the orchards in this vicinity now picking this choice variety of apple, the plant will operate in full blast.

Trade Leader In Wall Street Defends NRA

New York, Oct. 3—One of Wall Street's leading commission houses—Edward B. Smith & Co.—comes out in vigorous defense of the National Recovery Administration in the firm's current "Outlook for Equities" issued today.

That the present pause in business activity appears to be a natural development and that the outlook is definitely encouraging are conclusions which this Stock Exchange house believes overshadow recent setbacks in the security and other markets.

Meanwhile, indications of world recovery continue to accumulate, and people who condemn the NRA program before it is fairly under way are, curiously, those who stand to lose most if it fails, the firm declares, adding:

"We see no reason to be disturbed by the market's inclination to sell off in the face of the prevailing general pessimism, and we would be psychologically prepared for some further weakness, perhaps sufficient to bring about retracement of a full 50 per cent of the entire February-July advance.

"We are now witnessing merely one of those normal secondary movements which inevitably occur during the course of any prolonged upturn and, despite the rising tide of doubt and dissatisfaction and the gloomy pronouncements respecting the operation of the NRA, we shall in due course embark on another stage of the recovery movement."

Santa Fe Road Orders 35,000 Tons of Steel

New York, Oct. 3—According to the Associated Press, directors of the Santa Fe Railway today authorized purchase of 35,000 tons of rail and approved construction of the Los Angeles Union Station in conjunction with the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Obligatory Insurance Carried By 6,000,000 Italian Workers

Rome, Oct. 3 (AP).—Obligatory social insurance covering unemployment, old age, tuberculosis, industrial accidents and maternity benefits for workers has become so large a feature of Italian labor legislation that there are now 6,000,000 workers carrying this insurance.

The national social insurance fund, which is a government organization, has been in operation 14 years. It receives around 1,150,000,000 lire (about 92 million dollars) a year in premiums. In the year 1931, 790,220 persons received unemployment benefits amounting to 168,700,000 lire (about 13 million dollars).

The cost of social insurance is met two-thirds by the employers and one-third by the employes. The total contribution of the employers averages 760,000,000 lire; of the employes, 380,000,000.

Taking 4,608 lire (about $368) as the average annual wage, it is estimated that the obligatory social insurance represents a charge of 7.96 per cent. The worker pays 2.63 per cent, the employer, 5.33 per cent.

This does not include general compulsory sickness insurance, which may be added in the future. It is estimated that the charge will then be 9.45 per cent of the wage.

Compulsory insurance against disability, old age (beginning at 64 years) and unemployment were the first forms of insurance instituted in 1919. Insurance against tuberculosis, occupational accidents and disease and maternity were added later.

In the branch of maternity insurance, 950,000 women are thus protected. In an average year there are from 35,000 to 40,000 maternity cases, and around 5,000,000 lire (about $400,000) are paid out in benefits.

Compulsory social insurance has enabled the accomplishment of a remarkable work in reducing tuberculosis fatalities among workers. In the first 11 months of 1932 some 260,000 patients were under treatment for a total of 6,500,000 days. The results are shown by a 36 per cent reduction of deaths from tuberculosis in 1931 compared with 1920.

Colorado Potato Crop Will Record Decrease

Denver, Colo., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The Colorado potato crop this year will be smaller than that of last year, despite a higher yield per acre.

This year the potato crop will amount to 10,624,000 bushels, or 128 bushels per acre, as compared with 11,000,000 bushels or 110 bushels per acre last year, it was announced yesterday by Fred W. Beier, jr., of the agriculture bureau of economics here.

Beier said the Colorado crop was planted late and growth has been one to two weeks late all season. Stands are thin and dry land potatoes have suffered from extreme drouth, the report said.

U. S. Airways Carry 669,725 Passengers

Civil aircraft of the United States carried 669,725 passengers during the six months ended June 30, Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics, Department of Commerce, announced Monday. The number of miles flown by all civil aircraft, including both passenger and nonpassenger flights, was 58,610,605.

The passengers included 235,139 who rode on the scheduled airlines, and 434,586 who were carried by miscellaneous operators. Of the latter, 294,799 paid for air transportation, and 139,787 were not flown commercially.

In the first half of 1932, the passengers carried in civil aeronautics totaled 749,507, and the miles flown were 58,391,099.

Danville Tobacco Plant Employs 175 Workers

Danville, Va., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—The Export Leaf Tobacco Co., has reopened its redrying plant here providing employment for 175 persons and providing a new weekly payroll of $2,000.

Three redryers are being operated and the leaf being handled is that sent here by rail or truck from the markets further South, where selling is in progress.

Machinery Group To Meet in Capital

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—J. G. Benedict, treasurer and general manager of Landis Machine Co. here, is expected to be among the group of the country's leading industrialists who will meet behind closed doors at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington Thursday, at what will be the first conference ever held involving a vast proportion of the machinery manufacturers in the United States.

These industrialists will be official representatives of most of the principal machinery trade associations and out of the session is expected to come recommendations to the administration vitally concerning the rehabilitation under the NRA of the badly lagging capital goods industry. John W. O'Leary, of Chicago, president of the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, under whose auspices the meeting has been called, will preside.

The significance of the conference is indicated by the fact that those present will represent the ranking employers of more than 180,000 skilled workers, the survivors of a highly paid personnel that in normal times averaged well over 400,000 men annually.

Fares Cut Boosts Passenger Trade

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Local passenger business of the Great Northern Railway has increased 50 per cent as a result of the reduction in coach fares to 2 cents a mile, M. M. Hubbert, general Eastern passenger agent, announced today.

The gain, he said, is over the volume of travel during August and September last year.

Even the 50 per cent rise, he added, does not reflect the full effect of the lowered fares, pointing out that almost every month in the current year showed a decline in the road's local travel as compared with a year ago, until the new basis for coach and tourist sleeping car passengers was adopted.

Wheat Values Drift Lower After Rallies

Advance of Gold Is Help in Rise; Losses Laid to Planting Cut.

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Martial music from American Legion bands proved too lively a counter-attraction for grain traders today, and wheat prices varied little, with business lacking volume.

An advance in free gold quotations to $32.26, the best figures in several days, helped temporarily to lift the wheat market somewhat, but later the effect was offset by an unofficial estimate that only about 10 per cent less winter wheat would be sown in the United States this fall than was the case last year.

The administration objective is 15 per cent decrease.

Wheat Closes Easy.

Wheat closed easy, at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ lower; corn, ⅞ to 1⅛ down; oats, ¼ to ½ off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 35 cents.

The maximum transient gain of wheat values today was half a cent, and the largest decline at any time was but little greater. Most of the day, speculators were in a waiting mood, watching in vain for some significant major factor to develop.

Curtailment of trading operations meanwhile appeared to result largely from the fact that on account of the American Legion street parade the exchange was to close earlier than usual.

Considerable emphasis by friends of higher prices was put on assertions latest private estimates of 1933 wheat yields showed that only the accumulations from previous crops were safeguarding the United States against necessity to import breadstuffs.

Figures were cited by one authority indicating the current domestic primary movement of wheat to be the scantiest this season, and hardly more than half that of a year ago. He contended that 1933 underproduction of wheat was relatively the largest crop loss in United States history.

Corn and oats prices reflected liberal country offerings of corn to arrive. The offerings were mainly from Iowa, where husking has started.

Provisions were responsive to an upward trend of hog values.

Nation's Debt Is Reduced by $47,760,355

The Nation's gross public debt fell off $47,760,355 during September, standing at $23,050,754,554 when the Treasury's books were closed for the month.

To offset this, however, there was a decline of $53,960,609 in the net balance in the general fund, producing an increase for the month of $6,200,353 in the net public debt.

For the first quarter of the fiscal year, which began July 1, the Treasury's figures showed an advance in the gross debt of $512,081,944 and of $228,732,451 in the net public debt.

As compared with the corresponding three months of 1932, receipts showed an advance from $437,151,306 to $672,001,525.

The bulk of the gain lay in a rise in miscellaneous internal revenue from $169,826,081 to $362,150,005. Income tax collections declined from $174,148,114 to $163,169,846.

Ordinary general expenditures dropped from $839,099,271 to $614,366,458, while emergency expenditures, related to the recovery program climbed from $280,369,304 (the 1932 figure all went to the RFC) to $295,128,150.

On September 30, 1932, the deficit for the fiscal year stood at $682,317,268, as compared with $237,493,083 at the close of last month.

Walnut Exports Increase

Los Angeles, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The number of California walnuts to be shipped this year to Britain and Europe will approximate 70,000 bags, as compared with 900 last year, it was announced today by the California Walnut Growers Association. The large increase was attributed to a recent trade survey.

Wholesalers Report Wider Autumn Sales

Prices Continue Firm in Most Lines; Consumer Demand Studied.

New York, Oct. 3.—After the lightness which characterized demand in wholesale markets during the early weeks of the month, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., there has been some broadening of buying, despite a decrease in the number of visitors because of the religious holidays.

In some lines, orders are being postponed until the trend of consumer demand will have been established more definitely as unfavorable shopping weather has left in retailers' hands goods which should have moved by this time into consumers' channels.

While there has been a moderate accumulation of merchandise in some branches of the wholesale trade, the price structure generally has continued firm, as a renewal of buying activity is expected before stocks will have attained excessive proportions.

Headway on Deliveries.

This deferment of orders has permitted shipping departments to make more headway with their deliveries, although requests are growing more insistent for dresses, negligees, and blouses, which are being held up because of labor difficulties in the silk trade.

The volume of business booked for dresses and suits has continued to increase, but orders for coats did not reach the proportions of a few weeks ago.

Fur garments on the other hand, moved steadily, and sport coats, sweaters, and knitwear have been bought freely. Reorders for jewelry are on the increase, with novelty items and costume designs being particularly sought. The movement of house-furnishings and furniture has been going ahead constantly, with the largest gains recorded for curtains, kitchenware, and table linens. Electrical appliances are receiving but little attention just now.

Clothing Still Advances.

The men's clothing division continues to make a good showing, with reorders increasing as retailers are exceeding last year's sales totals, although fall buying has had to operate under severe weather handicaps in most districts.

Holiday requirements in the furnishings lines are being covered, particularly in neckwear, robes, shirts, and gloves. Heavier reorders are being booked for sweaters, corduroy slacks, and leather jackets, and there has been some buying of early winter sporting goods items.

Activity in the cotton goods market has been more pronounced than in several weeks, with sales large and profits good. Buying of sheets is progressing with more vigor, and supplies in some grades are none too plentiful, as mills are sold several weeks ahead Reorders for blankets, on the other hand, have been somewhat disappointing, and stocks have accumulated, to some extent, as retail buying has been deferred because of the warm weather.

The generous buying of percales during the last two weeks has about supplied the trade with early fall requirements. While current markups have been moderate, rather wide advances may be expected in these goods, if reorders should attain any sizable proportions.

Orders for carpets, rugs and floor coverings have reached the best volume in two weeks, and the delivery situation has been eased up somewhat by the let-down in buying during that period.

Mail orders reflect the general paucity of retailers' stocks and the continued strength of consumer buying. Demand has been divided about equally between the low-priced and the higher grades of goods, and has included a wide range of weaves.

Hardware Is Encouraging.

Wholesale hardware dealers are furnishing encouraging reports. Sales for the first four months of the year fell about one-third below those for the same period last year, but during the past four months they have increased to such an extent that volume in some districts is running 50 per cent ahead of that of 1932.

If this condition continues, the year's business is expected to be the best since 1928. The principal call is for seasonal goods, although the sale of tools has been on the increase for the first time in several years. Orders for firearms and ammunition are running larger than seasonal.

Despite some tapering off in the sales totals of retail grocers, wholesalers are beginning to receive more orders, although these are comparatively small in size and are chiefly to cover nearby needs.

Canned Goods.

The movement, however, is increasing in volume, with canned goods bulking larger at continued firm prices. Dried fruits continue active, particularly in spot goods; prices are being well maintained at former levels.

Distribution of beef has been up to the average for the month, with prices steady, while pork quotations have tended to advance, although there has been no marked increase in volume. The religious holidays helped the movement of poultry, and prices were higher.

Most grades of coffee weakened, but sales were larger than a year ago at this period. The mark-up in imported cheeses reflects the foreign exchange situation; good sales were reported. As the crop will be the lightest harvested since 1919, because of poor weather at the time of planting and the severe drought in many sections, potato quotations are advancing, with indications of the market rising abruptly before the end of the year.

Collateral Borrowings Reduced $20,619,743

New York, Oct. 3—According to the Associated Press the New York Stock Exchange today reported that collateral borrowings of members at the close of business on September 30, amounted to $896,595,531, a decrease of $20,619,743 from the total of August 31.

Release Is Near For $900,000 Bank Deposits

Mechanics-Mount Vernon Merger Gets Approval of Comptroller.

Absorption of the Mount Vernon Savings Bank by the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank was approved yesterday by the Comptroller of the Currency.

Deposits to be released through the merger are expected to amount to nearly $900,000, giving depositors of the Mount Vernon bank 35 to 40 per cent of their deposits. An increase in capital stock of $200,000 is contemplated by the Mechanics Savings Bank to take care of the increased volume of business.

First report that the Mechanics Savings Bank was considering absorption of the Mount Vernon appeared in The Washington Post on July 26. The Mount Vernon Bank, the first bank in the United States founded and supported by labor, has been in the hands of a conservator since the bank holiday.

Plan of the Merger.

Announcement of the merger was made by Ezra Gould, president of the Washington Mechanics Bank, and Frank W. Lee, former president of the Mount Vernon Bank, and chairman of the reorganization committee.

The plan approved by the Comptroller of the Currency provides for the sale of a certain percentage of the liquid assets of the Mount Vernon Bank to the Mechanics Bank. It is provided also that an equal amount of deposits of the Mount Vernon Bank shall be made available to its depositors through the Mechanics Bank.

Must Sign Waivers.

In order that the Mount Vernon Bank may be restored to its directors for transfer to the Mechanics Bank, it will be necessary for waivers to be signed by 75 per cent of the depositors for an amount necessary to restore the bank to solvency without provision being made for its recapitalization.

The exact amount of the deposits to be made available to Mount Vernon depositors will be determined at the date of opening of the combined banks. Balance of the assets will be placed in the hands of trustees to be approved by the Treasury Department. After these assets are liquidated a further amount will be paid by the trustees to the depositors of the Mount Vernon Bank, it was announced.

The home of the Mount Vernon Bank, at Ninth street and Mount Vernon place northwest, will become a branch office.

Mr. Lee will become a vice president of the combined banks, and Mr. Gould will be president.

What Today Means

"Libra."

If October 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., from 4:10 to 4:40 p. m. and from 6:45 to 7:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 8:45 a. m. and from 2 to 3:15 p. m.

The opportunity to give someone a boost on this date may come your way. Be on the watch for "fakers" and do not be taken in. If you have news of tragic sort to break to anyone it would seem advisable to do it by phone or by telegraph rather than in person, for you will most likely not be emotionally stable yourself.

The child born on this October 4 will quite likely spend a great deal of time in the company of older people. The naturally friendly type, he will know all the people on the block within a very short time. Orderly and, with an eye for beauty, he will always keep his belongings and his room in shipshape.

If October 4 is the date of your birth, you are probably an active person, but at the same time unhurried in your movements; you can not be speeded up beyod a certain point. You believe in thoroughness. You value the good opinion of people and go out of your way to please. In your personal affairs as well as in business it will be your desire to give service. It is what you give and how you give it, rather than when you give it that counts so far as you are concerned. You will not sacrifice quality and courtesy for speed. You are a calm person, able to meet any emergency without becoming ruffled and quick to assume command when others run wildly in circles.

Born on October 4, it is probably your philosophy that man is never called on to perform more than he is equal to. As a result, you attack every problem that comes your way with confidence, you use good judgment in coming to decisions, and you feel that resulting events will be all for the good. Like all people, you make mistakes, but you never worry over them nor let them stand in the way of your advancement. You should succeed, and your success will mean more than just the acquisition of material goods; you should gain contentment and peace of mind along with the other. You have fewer faults of character than most people, yet you try harder than the average person to overcome those that you have. Marriage will probably come early in life; it is possible that it will not be a successful union, but this result will not be of your own making.

Successful people born on October 4:

Arnold Daly, actor.
Rutherford B. Hayes, 19th President of the U. S.
Thomas C. Mendenhall, scientist.
Agnes Booth, actress.
Frederic Remington, artist.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

How Much Iodine?

Dr. G. W. Crile regards exopthalmic goiter and also ulcer of the stomach as results of our civilization, part of the penalty we pay for going at the prevailing rapid rate. This is true of some other forms of goiter, as well as of the variety in which the eyes become unuslally prominent. But if our pace is responsible for the thyroid abnormality, it is no more than the particular strain under which we break. The reason we are so breakable is because we do not get in food and drink as much iodine as we need.

At that, the amount required is almost unthinkably small. An editorial ni the Journal of the American Medical Association says that the average amount of iodine in the entire thyroid gland is only about one-eighth of a grain, varying from one-sixtieth of a grain to about one-half grain.

Such quantities are so small that the scientists have adopted a new word instead of grains to designate them. It is gamma. The minimum amount of iodine which the food and drink of the average man must supply if some form of goiter is to be avoided is given as 35 to 70 gammas. One grain is 6,400 gammas. Expressing this need in grains, we find that the average man must get in his food and drink from one two-thousandth to one one-thousandth of a grain of iodine a day. One grain would supply him for more than three years.

The amount required depends considerably upon the strain the individual is under. A small but rapidly growing child requires several times as much as a calm adult. Growing puts the body under great strain. Pregnant women and nursing mothers likewise require comparatively large doses, about as large as is required by a growing child. Pubertal and adolescent boys and girls must have rather large doses. Adults who are undergoing great emotional strain likewise require more than the average amounts. Examples are men who are in the midst of business worries, and women whose children are not turning out well.

While the person who gives the matter no thought is apt to suffer from iodine deficiency, when an effort is made to remedy the shortcoming it may be that too much will be taken. One-thousandth of a grain is a small amount.

Bitten by Snake.

W. K. writes: A friend of mine was bitten on the foot by a snake. Some one put colored crystals, said to be permanganate of potash, in the wound. It burned out the flesh to a depth of about a quarter of an inch. Now the difficulty is in curing the wound caused by the curse. Was this the proper treatment?

Reply.

It probably was not. Cauterizing with permanganate crystals was once the approved treatment for snake bite. It is not so regarded now. The crystals cauterized too violently and caused wounds that were slow in healing, as your friend has found. It was then proposed to use wine-colored solution of permanganate instead. This was open to several practical suggestions. It was not always easy to get water quickly for the solution, and the method is of no service unless it is used promptly. In extemporizing a solution one was liable to get a cauterizing solution, on the one hand, or a useless one, on the other.

For these reasons most emergency camping equipments do not contain permanganate for use in snake bite.

In this case there was a chance the snake was not poisonous and the bite was practically harmless.

Beware the Cough or Cold That Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

Warships Meet Air, Sea Attack In Mimic War

Results of Sham Battle Off Catalina Known Only to Tacticians.

Naval Drill Grounds, Off Southern California, Oct. 3 (AP).—The two most insidious forces of naval warfare—airplanes and submarines—joined today in a spectacular attack against the main battle strength of the American navy.

This encounter, a short distance south of Catalina Island, opened three days of tactical exercises of 120 war vessels and 250 aircraft of the United States fleet.

Twelve superdreadnaughts, America's mightiest battleships, moved into the zero zone cleared for action. They were flanked by a scouting battle line of light cruisers.

Between the light cruisers and the main battle line and beyond the scouting cruisers, darted squadrons of destroyers.

Far astern and widely separated, were the two great artcraft carriers, Saratoga and Lexington, protected by destroyers.

From out of nowhere came the raid, the flying squadrons swooping upon the battle force cruiser guard, and cutting them off with smoke screens, to pave the way for the undersea attack.

Result of the raid will be discussed later by naval tacticians, the actual tactics being naval secrets.

1,525 Crossing Fatalities In 1932 Lowest Since 1915

Steady Drop in Accidents Reported in Railway Safety Campaign.

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—The 1932 grade crossing death toll of 1,525, the American Railway Association was told today, was the smallest in any year since 1915.

The report was given the association's safety section by H. A. Rowe, of New York, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad.

Fatalities were one for every 15,405 automobiles registered, Rowe said. In 1931 there were 1,811 crossing deaths, or one for every 14,254 autos.

"The year 1932," Rowe said, "was the fourth consecutive year in which there has been a reduction in crossing accidents, fatalities and injuries since the peak year of 1928."

Charles E. Hill, of New York, chairman of the safety section, reported that railroad passenger fatalities had been cut from 250 in 1913 to 28 in 1932 and only one of the 28 was due to a train accident. Deaths among railroad employes, he said, were 72.5 per cent fewer in 1932 than in 1913, with three-fourths of the decrease listed since 1924, the period of intensive safety education.

Hubbell Pitches Giants to 4-2 Victory Over Nats in Opening Game

Nats See "Lady Luck" Give Most of Her Smiles to New York Foe

Five Distinct Breaks Aid Giants

"Team of Destiny" Gets Short End of Good Fortune in Game.

Goslin Was Victim of Two Instances of Terrymen's Luck.

By Frank H. Young
(Post Staff Correspondent).

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 3.—Throughout the 1924 season, the Nats were dubbed "The team of destiny" by the writers and fans and, shortly after they began hitting their stride this season, the same old appellation was dug up and tagged on the 1933 edition.

But, if Cronin's outfit is a "team of destiny" one would fail to see where destiny helped any in this afternoon's game, which saw the New York Giants cop, 4 to 2.

Destiny played its part today, but with reverse english as far as the Nats were concerned. Eliminating errors, which must be considered as part of the game, there were five distinct "breaks" this afternoon and the Giants benefited from all of them.

Hubbell, on the Giants' hill, pitched great ball. He allowed only five hits and struck out ten, including Myer, Goslin, Manush, Kuhel, Bluege, Stewart and Russell. So effective was he that Left Fielder Joe Moore, who had to come in fast for Cronin's near Texas leaguer in the seventh, was the only New York flyhawk to have a chance afield, while the only fly balls hit by the Nats were Myer's single in fourth and four fouls, two being pops to Catcher Gus Manusco.

Two Unearned Runs.

The Nats' other four hits were through the infield. Yet, despite this effective pitching by the Giants' ace southpaw, the Nats might have beaten him had they gotten their share of the breaks of the game. Not counting Myer's first error on the opening play of the game, which gave Ott an opportunity to clout his homer for two unearned runs, the first frown from "Lady Luck" came in the third.

Giant base-runners were on third and first with one out when Jackson shot a spinning roller down first-base way. Joe Kuhel came in fast for the ball, but it spun off his glove to Buddy Myer, who made the out to Pitcher Jack Russell, covering first. Normally, the runner heading for home would have been nipped, but, instead, the New Yorkers scored their final run of the game on it.

Bad break No. 2 came in the fourth. One Washington run was already in and Cronin was on first, when Schulte hit one of Hubbell's offerings right on the nose, Goose Goslin being the only other Nat to do so throughout the whole game. The pitcher made a great leap, managed to get the finger tips of his gloved hand in the way, and Schulte was fortunate to beat it out for a single. Had the ball not been deflected, Cronin would have reached third, at least, and no one knows what would have happened.

Triple Portion of Woe.

It was not until the eighth that Lady Luck again stepped into the picture and then she handed the Nats a triple portion of woe. With one out, Hubbell issued the only two passes of the game, Sewell and Pinch-Hitter Dave Harris drawing them in rapid order. Myer, next up, clouted a hard bounder to Blondy Ryan, Giant shortstop, who muffed the ball and, while trying to recover it, batted it to Hughey Critz on second to nip Harris for a force-play there. So, instead of having the bases filled and none out, the Nats had the third and first cushions occupied, with two out of the way.

This brought Goose Goslin to the tee and bad breaks Nos. 4 and 5 were chalked up against the Nats' Lady Luck at his expense. First off, he shot a liner toward the right field wall which looked like a sure double. It would have tied the score, but the ball started curving to the right and finally hit the base of the stands, foul by no less than a yard.

Given another chance, the Goose lined another toward right. The Nats had visions of it scoring one run and possibly two, but Bill Terry, Giant first sacker and manager, made a leaping stab for the ball and probably was as much surprised as was anyone else when he discovered it in his glove when he came down to earth.

Nats' Final Stand Fails.

Even with these five happenings going against them, the Nats kept on battling and threatened to stage one of their famous last-round stands in the ninth. An error by Ryan, singles by Cronin and Schulte and Kuhel's infield out netted one run and moved the other runners to second and third. Only a clean hit was needed here to tie the count.

The hit, however, was not forthcoming, but Lady Luck can not be held responsible for this, unless it was in having the turns at bat fall to Ossie Bluege and Luke Sewell. Bluege, who had previously fanned twice, did so again, and then Sewell rolled to Jackson, whose peg easily beat him to first.

The Favorite Pose of the Nationals as They Were Introduced to Hubbell's Famous Screw Ball

Ott Makes 4 Hits; Myer 3 Errors

New Yorker's Hurling Up to Expectation, Pegler Finds.

Polo Grounds Jammed for First of Series' Excitement.

By Westbrook Pegler.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 3.—The citizens stormed the Polo Grounds this afternoon to witness the performance of some more baseball history by Carl Hubbell and Mel Ott, of the Giants, and Buddy Myer, of the Washington club. These parties were assisted by miscellaneous others in arriving at a score of 4 to 2 after recurrent spells of excitement. The Giants got the four.

Hubbell pitched according to all the beautiful expectations which had been created by weeks of acclaim and controversial ballyhoo, holding the Senators, who were supposed to be very hard men at bat, to five hits, including two which were not much credit to the authors nor any discredit to himself.

Ott made four hits in four attempts, his first being a home run in round one, which scored Moore, who wouldn't have been in the way at all if Myer hadn't tramped all over his grounder. This mishap was only the first of three mistakes which pretty thoroughly fouled up the prestige of the Myer boy, who came to town for the games with a very fair reputation as a ball player and a steady hand in emergencies.

Diagnosis of Hubbell Ball.

It was a long way from the upper deck to the sward where the athletes were earning their loot and their clippings, but the most reliable descriptive work on the sort of nuisance that Hubbell throws up in those hitters depits it as a knuckler with a lot of over-spin. You wouldn't really wish to say, from the evidence of the naked eye, as Hubbell was serving them up, whether they were spinning over from the top side or up from under or sidewise or just floating along steady. The ball, or "old apple," as we used to call it when Ping Bodie was around, came up white and rather blurry and, with the few exceptions noted, nothing happened over to it.

They do allege that the ball, as Hubbell throws it, is very hard to hit anywhere but into the dirt. This is not consistent with the day's evidence, for some of them went kiting to large altitudes, but, generally, all that was predicted of Hubbell was correct. It was predicted that he would pin the Nationals' ears back and he did no less than that.

There was horn-music before the contest and the management of the New York firm quietly rebuked the management of the Philadelphia Athletics by draping the ballyard with a great yardage of red, white and blue bunting. The Athletics conducted their world series ceremonies to the tune of a cracked phonograph record played on a loud speaker and never unfurled a foot of gala cloth to relieve the ugly commonplaceness of a very ordinary ball-yard.

Schacht as Helen Wills.

Al Schacht, the Washington comic, in an old plug hat and waiter's jacket, labored hard during the infield practice of the Washington team, performing a routine of sprawls and tumbles in the dust around third base, but his old partner in hilarity, Nick Altrock, sulked and would not join him in any foolishness at this time. Nick was hitting the ball to the athletes in grim devotion to the duty of getting heroes ready for heroic work. The feeling between Al and Nick is one of love to hatred turned, anyway, and they never speak as they pass by unless some special insult comes to mind.

When the rehearsal was over, however, and while the groundkeepers were fine combing the skinned sections of the yard, Al and Nick became partners again for a moment in a somewhat biting burlesque of the default of Helen Wills Moody at Forest Hills. With a pillowslip draped about his waist and a jockey-type visor shading his eyes, Al impersonatel the abdicated Queen of the Grass Plots, and after some minutes of droll bouncing around in pursuit of an imaginary tennis ball, fetched up with a limp leg and a crick in his back. The boys left the patrons laughing as they said good-by for the present and yielded the field to the umpires in blue who clustered on the base line, not unlike sheriff's deputies preparing to solemnize a hanging, squinting this way and that and pointing and conferring on the somber problems of jurisdiction and interpretation which might arise during the game of ball.

"Big Train" Pulls In.

Some of the field boxes on the two extremities of the horse-shoe were still unoccupied, at the approach of game time, but the citizens were still closing in on the big plant from all directions. There were no vacant places 10 minutes later. A gyroscope ship flapped over the scene, its egg-beater whirring clumsily, dragging a long ad-

Harris Likely To Manage Red Sox

'Bucky' Reported Ready to Sign Four-Year Boston Contract.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—According to well-defined rumors going the rounds at the World Series press headquarters here tonight, Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris, "Boy Manager" of the Nats in 1924 and 1925, who recently resigned his berth as leader of the Detroit Tigers, shortly will be named to succeed Marty McManus, of the Red Sox.

Harris, it is understood, has had several conferences with Bill Yawkey, millionaire owner of the American League Club in Boston, and the only hitch with respect to his appointment is said to be the matter of the length the contract will cover. Harris is understood to be willing to take the job provided he is signed for four years.

In case Yawkey is unwilling to give Harris a four-year contract, and the two fail to reach a compromise, Roger Peckinpaugh, another former Nat whom Walter Johnson succeeded at Cleveland, is in the running.

Since the season ended, however, Harris stepped into the picture, was deemed the better man, and so has the right of way now, reports say. Peck is here for the series and only too willing to step into McManus' shoes in case Harris and Yawkey fail to reach an agreement. An announcement of McManus successor is expected within the next few days.

Winooka to Race Equipoise Nov. 7

Laurel, Md., Oct. 3 (AP). Handlers of Winooka, Australian sprint star, announced late today that Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney had consented to run Equipoise, American handicap champion, against their horse in a match race.

The announcement came from Rufe Naylor, manager, and Michel Polson, trainer of the Australian horse, which was brought to this country to meet the 5-year-old son of Pennant.

Whitney, in his acceptance of their challenge, stipulated the race is to be run at the annual meeting of the United Hunts, at Belmont Park, N. Y., on November 7.

S. E. Andrews Wins Post Score Contest; 10,000 Try

The winner!—S. E. Andrews, of 1614 Hobart street northwest. Tabulation of the more than 10,000 entries in The Post's World Series contest after the game yesterday revealed an almost uncanny prediction from Mr. Andrews, who was credited with 56 points out of a possible 73.

K. A. Ford, of 1715 P street northwest, was second with 52 points and Comdr. H. E. Fischer, of the La Salle Apartments, won a three-way tie for third place by getting his 51 points guess in ahead of two other contestants credited with this score.

The winner is a native of Boston and selected the Giants, not because his sympathies lie in that direction, but because he believed he knew the capabilities of Carl Hubbell. Andrews not only called the turn on the 4-2 score, but he predicted the correct number of hits for both teams and allowed the Giants the two errors they made. He had seven half-innings correctly marked for Washington and four for New York.

Andrews will receive four box seats to all games played in Washington. Ford will be The Post's guest for three box seats, while Commander Fischer is awarded two box seats.

Start of Series Like First Nats Captured

New York, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—For the first time since 1924 the National League today won the opening game of a world series classic.

The 1933 series today took on the semblance of the last world series between the Nats and the Giants, in 1924, when the New York team won the opening game, 4 to 3, with Art Nehf opposing Walter Johnson. The Nats won the series. In succeeding years, the American Leaguers, without exception, had won the first game of the classic.

Catching On to Baseball

Portrait of a High Hat Going Native At the World Series

By William Harlan Hale.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—So this is the Polo Grounds, is it? Why? Polo? Much too large for polo, of course, and it lacks that exclusive touch so necessary for the proper brilliance of my friend Tommy Hitchcock, and my friend Pedler, and my other friends. Well, they've lured me into this, and I shall have to stick it out, I suppose.

It really is the worst of all possible games, and I have never had anything to do with it. I believe I haven't seen a game since Camp Keewatin beat Camp Keetauba, with me as the unwilling cheering section. It will be rather embarassing to talk to my neighbors. Nine men, nine balls, three strikes, three batters up; yes, I do remember all that. And then I believe there was a great deal of importance attached to the difference between double and triple hits, or something of that nature.

You say "Kill the umpire," not "Kill the referee;" refer to "Ball park," not "Stadium," and if you see pitcher, catcher, and manager getting together in the middle of the field, don't say, "They're taking time out, three minutes left before the half."

The seats are good, at any rate, and peanuts make the game endurable and add that circus-like flavor so needed when the people here begin to take themselves too seriously. Imagine getting hysterical when a man drops a stuffed section of horse's hide to the ground!

But I suppose the spectators really can't help it; they have so little excitement in their own lives.

But hold on! Look at that bunch of political big-wigs over there. Senator Pat Harrison, too. They're not quite lacking in excitement. The idea of coming up here to loll around, senator, when there's inflation to be put over.

Why is it, do you suppose, that every senator, to be a good senator, has got to be a baseball fan, just as every President has got to be a passionate fisherman? Is it to keep the vote? Or is it perhaps some sort of an escape mechanism to compensate for all their suppressed desires in Washington? Freud said a lot about that somewhere, and I ought to look it up.

Wow! Right out there into the bleachers. The man has ability. But why does he throw himself down in the dirt at second base there, when he knew he was going to be safe? Grand stand play, of course.

Prima donnas! There are probably more of them in baseball than in grand opera.

If I were that pitcher, Hubbell, with 46,000 eyes watching each detail of my windup, I would go right to pieces. But look how calmly he takes it—as if he were practicing some slow balls alone in his back yard. Having "nerve" in baseball seems to mean having patience. You must never hurry the proceedings. You must keep a measured, dignified pace of things while all your blood rises to rush out and start something. It is probably the most leisurely game in the world, even including——

Wait a minute; now what was that? There are several men running in all directions, and what seemed like half a dozen balls flying. It happened so fast I couldn't begin to follow it.

Cronin, the mighty, is out there taking the barrage of Hubbell, the wily; it's the great style all right, speed pitted against power. And they do stand up, like gentlemen, and not merely crouch and roll around as they do in football. My only remaining objection is the way these fellows get dressed up. Why a man, in order to throw a small-sized ball, has to wrap himself up in baggy knickers, a couple of flannel shirts and jerseys, a school boy's cap and a pair of South Polar stockings, is more than I can see. What ever tailor designed that masterpiece of an outfit, was trying to perform a practical joke. Even the most agile and graceful of the heroes looks much like a sack of potatoes.

Good fielding there—did I say this game was slow? I seem to be missing the half of it. I wish our team would catch up on the Giants' lead.

Got only two innings left to do it, though. The whole thing is really a pitchers' battle. And that is the fundamental weakness of baseball as a sport; the pitcher completely outreaches all the others in importance, as well as in the amount of work he has to do. In hockey and football and in my friends' polo, everyone is in the game almost all the time. No, this isn't a game I would cheer over.

But look, if Senator Harrison isn't cheering! And that pair of preachers—they are all red in the face from the excitement. And this very beautiful girl over here with the ultra-sophisticated hat—she's actually saying "Ah, rotten!"

And there's a reason. Washington is at bat in the last inning with no outs and the bases full. Three runs are needed to match the Giants. Can they do it? I mean, can we do it? Hubbell looks as if he were blowing up. We ought to score a couple of hits off him. Now or never! Come on now, get in there! Show him your stuff! Wallop it!

Go to it, Goslin! That's the way, Goose! Don't let him kid you into swatting at that one! Now, watch this one that's coming, and sock it out to Yonkers! Crack it! Tear the hide off it! Attaboy!

Columbus Wins Title, Beating Buffalo, 10-2

Bison Stadium, Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 3. (AP).—The Columbus Red Birds, of the American Association, tonight won the championship of double A Minor League Baseball as they defeated the Buffalo Bisons of the International League, 10-2.

Myer Saw Fatality Just Before Game

New York, Oct. 3.—Second Baseman Buddy Myer, of the Nats, was charged with three errors in today's opening world series game with the Giants, but some allowance should be made. While taxiing to the Polo Grounds this morning, a pedestrian, trying to get out of the way, jumped in front of a truck. The truck hit him, dashed him against the elevated railway structure and killed him instantly.

Being witness to such an accident does ball players no good, especially when they are heading for a world series game, the ballyhoo of which already has both participants and fans keyed up to a high pitch. Buddy was exceptionally nervous when he reported at the Polo Grounds and still was talking and thinking of the accident tonight.

Cubs Face White Sox Today in City Series

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Beaten in their attempt to represent the National League in the world series for the second straight year, Chicago's Cubs will try to wrest the city championship from the White Sox in the first game tomorrow with the Cubs favored.

Guy Bush, winner of 20 games this year, was Manager Charlie Grimm's selection for a starting pitcher, but Manager Lew Fonseca refused to name his. "Sad Sam" Jones was regarded as the best bet for the Southsiders. The series will be patterned after the world series—best four out of seven.

Crowder Will Hurl Today For Nats

Right-Hander to Oppose Schumacher at Second Game.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 3 (Spl.).—On the good right arm of Alvin Crowder, Manager Joe Cronin will stake the Nats' hopes in the second game of the World Series with the Giants tomorrow.

Tomorrow's game became the topic of the Nats' immediately after the final putout this afternoon that sealed the Giant's 4—2 victory in the opener, and Cronin discarded every trace of the secrecy with which he has heretofore surrounded his pitching nominations.

"It's Crowder tomorrow, and he'll beat 'em, too," Cronin announced in the Nats' dressing room, with his fighting jaw protruding just a bit more prominently from his fighting countenance.

Both Right Wingers.

Thus the second game of the series shapes up as a duel of right-handed pitchers, for Manager Terry of the Giants, has announced that he will send his talented sophomore star, Harold Schumacher, to the mound tomorrow.

Cronin's selection of Crowder was prompted by the success which the right-handed Jack Russell encountered against the Giants this

Nats, Undismayed by Loss of Opener, Still Certain They Are Giants' Superior

Players Feel Major Test Is Over

Hubbell Is Given Credit, But Deemed No Superman.

Differences in Infield's Surface to Change Style of Play.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 3.—The first 1933 world series game is over and the Nats lost, but under the "strange as it seems" classification should be recorded the fact that Manager Joe Cronin and his henchmen were as jubilant after taking a licking as they were before the game got under way.

In their locker room, located in center field, where the players talk freely, say what they think and mean what they say, their general thought was that, if the Giants are no better than they showed themselves to be today, it will be "just a breeze" for them to cop the series and world title and what goes with it in the games yet to be played.

"If Hubbell is their best pitching bet and their hitters and fielders played to form this afternoon," said one, "the Giants aren't even in the same class with us." And this seemed to be the consensus.

While the players were drying themselves following their showers, comment flew thick and fast and if was all of the same tenor. Even Walter Stewart, who was knocked out of the box before getting a man out in the third frame, declared the National League champs were punchless.

Cronin Still Undismayed.

"Gee, I must have been terrible to let a team like that hit me," he said. "I don't believe there is a team in our league with as little punch."

As the conversation shifted around to Hubbell's pitching, the boys gave him credit—they had to do that—but in the same breath they followed with the comment that he will not stop them the next time he pitches. All agreed that he did not show as much stuff today as did Garland Braxton, former Nat and the same type of pitcher, whom they have pounded every time since he was shunted to another team.

"Hubbell's screw ball is merely a drop, while Braxton's shoots to either side he wants to," they contended, and all were confident that, after having looked at Hubbell's stuff today, they will know just what to expect from him the next time he draws the box assignment.

Manager Cronin was particularly optimistic. "It was Hubbell's day; give him credit," he said, but just one more hit in the eighth or ninth innings would have made all the difference in the world. Even with his great pitching, I thought we were going to get him in the ninth. If the Giants can only beat us by a couple of runs behind a well-pitched game like that, I don't see why we should fear them. We'll get 'em tomorrow."

Phil Hurler Is Bonded After Auto Kills Man

Richmond, Va., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—W. A. (Cy) Moore, pitcher for the Philadelphia National League team, was charged with involuntary manslaughter, following the death today of Quincy T. Davis, 50, from injuries received when he was struck by Moore's automobile near Ashland, late yesterday.

But "Just-a-Ball-Game" Aspect Characterizes Series' Opening.

vertising streamer against the bright blue sky. Walter Johnson, who used to chuck it past the hitter for another generation of Washington ball players, went inching and squeezing along the cramped main aisle in front of the press section. His sober Scandinavian features were a bit sharper and glummer than they used to be and Walter never was a laughing ball player at his merriest, although, in his time, he had little to worry about in a professional way.

The inevitable cowbells jangled stupidly here and there in the attendance, the most laborious and least inspiring form of rooting yet devised, and when "The Star-Spangled Banner" had been tootled by a block-party band half hidden behind the wing of the left field stand, there came from some powerful throat the traditional solo holler of "play ball."

The contest developed into a ball game of the just-a-ball-game type in the Giants' half of the third. There is a popular delusion that World Series ball games are superball games, but the statistics stand in the record and many scenes live in the retentive memories of the experts to show that most World Series ball games are slightly more just-a-ball-game, if the bunting and music and gala rites are subtracted, than the average just-a-ball-game.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

New York, Oct. 3.

I AM leading with my chin again this evening and insisting that the Nats will win this here world series.

My head is clearing rapidly from that incident this afternoon when the Giants met me coming out of my corner and slapped a 4-2 defeat on the Nats.

I saw nothing this afternoon, with the exception of Carl Hubbell, that constrains me to revise my opinions about the respective merits of the Nats and Giants. The difficulty, of course, is excepting Hubbell, but the guy can't win four games in this series.

Giants Not So Gigantic.

The rest of the Giants didn't assume any ugly proportions as far as I'm concerned. Up there at the plate they were making ten hits off some of the worst pitching that Walter Stewart ever has committed. Out in the field Blondy Ryan appeared to be the Nats' for the taking.

The difference between the Nats and the Giants today, excepting Hubbell, of course, was that cheap home run of Mel Ott's into the right field bleacher which, if hit in Washington, would have found Goose Goslin waiting at ease while it dropped in his glove.

And the stage was set for that homer by Buddy Myer's grammar school error on the Nats' first fielding chance of the game. Good right-handed pitching will stop the Giants, who aren't much to stop in the first place. Jack Russell demonstrated that little theory in his five-inning relief shift this afternoon. And methinks the Nats have some right fair right-handed pitching in the persons of Al Crowder and Monte Weaver.

Hubbell Makes Monkeys.

The only qualms I will admit concerning this world series and the chances of the Nats center about that ole Davil, Carl Hubbell. There's a pitcher for you, and if he could pitch three more games during the series, I'd be thinking about tossing in the towel.

To put it in the vernacular, Hubbell was making monkeys out of the Nats today, mixing his screw ball with a fast curve. All down the line the Nats were fidgety up there at the plate, wondering what he was going to throw, and those ten strike-outs are no myth.

And here's another thing. The Nats were beginning to slove Hubbell in those late innings. He simply weakened, so I have no great hopes that in their next meeting they will have learned much about him that they can use to advantage. Hubbell was tiring, that's all, and had he been able to pitchh those last two innings like he pitched the first seven, it would have been no contest.

The Nats were so helpless against Hubbell toward the late stages of the game that when Luke Sewell worked the count to three balls and one strike it constituted a Washington rally.

There was some doubt as to whether Joe Cronin was going to remove Stewart from the box during a conference in the third inning. But when Cronin finally gave him a pat on the back Stewart's fate was sealed. The pat on the back in Cronin always precedes the actual ouster.

That home run by Ott still rubs me. Goslin looked as if he'd like to tear down a fence and get at it os it sailed over his head. The durn thing didn't make a sound when Ott hit it. The National League ball and its thick cover simply oozes off the bat.

And to think the Nats hit 26 home runs in practice the day before against the pitching of Bob Burke and Bill McAfee. It seems that there are pitchers, and, then again, there is Hubbell.

Middle Atlantic Pros to Meet Here Today

THE next-to-the-last important professional event of the season—the Middle Atlantic P. G. A.—will demand the attention of a field of 25 golf maestros, beginning this morning at Chevy Chase's course.

A three-day tournament, the competition will open with an 18-hole qualifying round, and will be followed in the afternoon by the first round of match play. Two more 18-hole matches are scheduled for tomorrow, while the two finalists will battle for the crown Friday over the 36-hole route.

Glenn Spencer, long-driving Maryland Country Club pro, will risk his crown and District pros, headed by the commander in chief of money prize winners, Al Houghton, yesterday indicated that the title would not pass into alien hands again.

Houghton, who has amassed close to $2,000 in winnings this season, is playing good enough golf to capture the title. A grand medal player, Houghton is out to win a championship that has eluded him for years. Among other favorites are Bob Barnett, host pro, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president, and former champion, and Ralph Beach, Suburban Country Club kingpin.

Si Simons Dies; Printer-Player

Death yesterday claimed one of Washington's outstanding amateur baseball players, Malcolm (Si) Simons, for the last 10 years pitcher, catcher and infielder on the crack Washington Union Printers' team.

Simons, 29, died at 5:15 p. m., at his home, 2845 Blair place northeast, after a week's illness during which pneumonia set in. He pitched his last game with the local printers against the Detroit Typos at Detroit during the annual printers tournament, losing after a close battle.

One of the most versatile all-around players, capable of performing at any position with equal skill, Simons had a tryout with the Washington Nationals in 1928.

McMillan Goes After Londos Via Steele

"Flying Tackle King" to Be Auditorium Star Tomorrow Night.

READY to rassle 'em all in an effort to again land a showdown with Champion Jim Londos (who will return from a European tour shortly), "Jarring Jim" McMillan, wrestling's "flying tackle king," tomorrow night will crash headlong with Ray Steele at the Washington Auditorium.

"If I get by Steele tomorrow night, I'll take all the Shikats, Marshalls and Stechers they throw my way," McMillan declares. "I'm hot after Londos, and I'm willing to go my limit to get him. Make no mistake about it, I consider Steele one of the greatest. Certainly, if I get by him, I'll fear none of the rest, Londos included."

Financially independent, McMillan declares he now wrestles mostly for the 'thrill of it."

"Not that I'm refusing any good purses," McMillan adds, "because I'm not.

Zeniaki (the "Siberian Wolf Man") will pair off with George Zaharias in the semifinal. Cliff Olson vs. Karl Davis, Lou Plummer vs. Jacques Humberto, and Sol Slagel vs. Paul Boesch will work the brevities.

Once-Overs on Series

By H. I. Phillips.

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 3.—President Roosevelt didn't manage to get to the opening game of the world series here today, but along toward the finish it looked as if it were nearing the conflict with all his official influence and the bean trust.

* * * *

Up to the closing moments of the game there seemed no hope for the District of Columbia in the struggle, and the Giants looked invincible and stormproof when Washington suddenly arose as if it had received a new code, additional bank credit and relief from the NRA.

* * * *

The New Yorks won, 4 to 2, but in those last two innings Washington came so close to coming out of the depression that the Giants are still groggy.

* * * *

Up to the unexpected transformation from a group of helpless business men to an aggregation of embattled optimists, Carl Hubbell, ace of the Giant pitching staff, had the boys from the Potomac merely going through funny motions.

* * * *

It was pathetic; no such pitching had been seen in a world series since the days of the immortal Matty.

* * * *

President Roosevelt, being in town with an official invitation to the series, it seemed that nothing could help Washington except a Presidential speech, inflation and an order to bury this year's crop of Giant twirlers.

* * * *

And in the eighth and ninth spasms, it seemed that Joe Cronin's boys had received assurances that this aid was coming.

* * * *

The way the flawless Hubbell suddenly began to wilt and the Giants to boot balls around caused the fans to suspect that the home team had also received orders from Washington to turn in their blue eagle or something.

Goose Goslin had a grand chance to blow up the works in the eighth, after Hubbell had astounded everybody by giving two bases on balls, but failed.

* * * *

As if this weren't shock enough, the Nats loaded the bases again in the ninth, only to see Hubbell the Great return to form and put down the mutiny.

* * * *

Outside of the great performance of Hubbell for the first seven innings, up to which time no visiting fireman hit a ball to the outfield, it had become a monotonous contest.

* * * *

The fans were there with cow bells and fish horns, but there is no kick out of ringing cow bells at flawless pitching. It was the last-minute revolt that made the game one on the books.

* * * *

So far as Washington is concerned, it is chanting the old witch song "Hubbell, Hubbell, toil and trouble" and will do so for years to come. Hubbell started in by striking out the first three men up and he had those Potomac River athletes swinging like a blindfolded golfer at a submerged ball with a rubber hose.

* * * *

All in all, it was a great contest. It was of unusual significance as a world series game for two reasons.

* * * *

It was the first series game in 12 years under the Democrats and the first one in 14 years under beer.

Series Notes

Polo Grounds, New York, N. Y., Oct. 3 (Spl.).—The first definite clew to the pitching choice of Manager Cronin was gained 45 minutes before game time, when it was observed that Walter Stewart was sitting calmly on the bench while Al Crowder and Earl Whitehill were shagging flies in the outfield.

Cronin's preference was slowly being revealed in the pregame proceedings when Stewart was the only pitcher to partake of batting practice. That constituted perfectly legible handwriting on the wall. Stewart, undeniably, was Cronin's choice.

The vicinity of the press box was a passing show of baseball notables. In endless procession, seemingly, the greats of the game filed into their seats. Walter Johnson, Hans Wagner, John McGraw, Babe Ruth, Rogers Hornsby, Bill Evans, Marty McManus, Muddy Ruel, Bucky Harris, gave the press coop a semi-prosessional touch.

That the park would be a complete sellout by game time was assured when the 20,000 unreserved seats were put on sale this morning and quickly taken up.

Seats adjoining the Nats' dugout represented a bit of transplanted Washington. President Clark Griffith of the Nats with his official family—friends and wives of the ball players — occupied approximately 100 seats abaft the players' bench.

That little Washington section of the 50,000 in the stands resembled nothing more than a mausoleum in that awful first inning when Myer, Goslin and Manush achieved nothing but a wand drill against Hubbell's screw ball. It was almost too much.

The Nats were first in everything but run scoring—first to strike out, first to beef about a called strike and first to make an error.

Roosevelt High Ties Emerson, 6-6

Emerson Institute and Roosevelt High fought to a 6-6 deadlock in a bruising football battle yesterday afternoon.

Emerson's touchdown resulted from a blocked kick that ended on its opponents' 9-yard line in the second quarter. In two plays, A. Fenlon escorted the ball over for a touchdown.

Roosevelt delivered its answer in the form of a touchdown in the third quarter. A 15-yard penalty brought the oval to the 4-yard line. On the second thrust Hill went over.

Burl Easy Winner In Twin City Bouts

Eddie Burl defeated Baltimore Benny Schwartz last night at Twin City Arena before a fair, shivery gathering of ladies and gents.

The Jacksonville windmill slugged his way to win nine of the ten stanzas, the fourth a draw.

In the semiwindup, Micky Genaro, substituting for Mike Scipio, won a well-earned draw with Philadelphia Ernie Caesar, in 6 rounds.

Death Closes Career of Stribling

Boxer's Family at Side, as During Ring Battles; Rites Tomorrow.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 3 (AP).—Death today ended the career of W. L. (Young) Stribling, Georgia heavyweight boxer.

He died at 6 o'clock this morning. Physicians attributed his death to acute peritonitis. They marveled at the tenacity with which the 28-year-old Macon boy clung to life.

Stribling died as he had fought in the ring—surrounded by his parents, his brother and his wife, Clara.

Body to Lie in State.

His body will lie in state at the Macon Municipal Hospital tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Public funeral services will be held at the Auditorium Thursday afternon at 3 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. J. E. Sammon, pastor of the Vineville Baptist Church. The Shrine, National Guard and other organizations will take part. Interment will be in Riverside Cemetery here.

His left foot was almost torn loose and his pelvis crushed as an automobile struck his motorcycle Sunday.

He broke into national prominence as a result of his famous "three decision" fight with Mike McTigue, when light heavyweight champion, at Columbus, Ga., in 1923. Later he fought Paul Berlenbach, Jack Sharkey, Tommy Loughran, Primo Carnera, Phil Scott and Ernie Schaft.

Lost to Schmeling.

He lost his last bid for the heavyweight title when he suffered a technical knockout in the fifteenth round in his fight with Max Schmeling in Cleveland, in 1931.

At his best Stribling was brilliant. Tall and handsome, he was the physical equal of any man he faced. Some said he lacked courage, but they had never seen him fly in a plane, take it off the ground in a climb so steep as to make veteran pilots shiver.

Flowers and messages of condolence came to the Striblings from all over the world today. Jack Sharkey, who beat Stribling in Miami in 1929, called him a "great fighter," and said "his splendid family life made him an example for others."

"Listen, son," Stribling replied, "we're in the tenth round and we've got to fight. I'm your manager and you've got to do what I tell you, and I say, fight."

Smiles and Nods.

W. L. smiled up at his father and nodded his head.

Death closed a career which saw Stribling fight almost every champion of the past decade from the middleweights to the heavyweights, but never quite scale the peak.

Bleachers at the Polo Grounds filled rapidly when the gates were opened yesterday morning. The New York faithful in the stands were not disappointed—at least not by Hubbell.

Buddy Myer starts a terrific swing against one of Mr. Hubbell's fast ones. But the effort availed little. Buddy, the first man up, was the first man down as Hubbell started on his strike-out rampage that spelled disaster for 10 Washington batsmen.

And here's Joe Cronin biting the dust, forced out at second on a slow bunt by Shulte, after "Smiling Joe" had reached first on a dribbling single in the second inning.

Jamestown Comes From Far Behind to Win Opening Day Feature at Laurel

Sation Loses 1st Money By Neck

Widener's Entry Pays $3.40; Is Ridden by Workman.

RACING rturned to Laurel yesterday, after a year's absence, welcomed by cool weather and a sizeable throng of its devotees. A well-balanced card of eight races, featured by the 6-furlong Capital Handicap, ushered in the sport.

Fighting his way back to the top of the sport he dominated as a juvenile three years ago, George D. Widener's Jamestown scored an impressive victory in the feature, winning by a neck over Sation, a stable-mate. Marooned, sporting the colors of the Le Mar Stock Farm, finished third in a field of six.

Frail little Jimmy Sullivan, a Washington youth, booted home the last two winners on the card to garner riding honors for the day. He was astride Considerate in the seventh, which rewarded its backers with a $20.20 mutuel, and Zembla in the finale, which paid the handsome price of $9.60.

Jamestown scampered the distance in 1:11 4-5, and was so convincing that there was serious talk of matching him with Winooka, Australian sprint champion, in the near future. The foreign horse recently arrived from the West Coast, seeking match races with any American horse at six or seven furlongs.

Winner in his 1933 debut, the sleek 5-year-old son of St. James, came from far back of the fast early pace to take the decision. Jamestown broke in close quarters along the inner rail and raced pinned in for a half a mile while Flying Hour and Marooned fought for the lead at a brisk pace.

Coming into the home-stretch, Jockey Sonny Workman took Jamestown to the outside, and once clear, the Widener colt galloped up on the heels of the leaders. He assumed command at the sixteenth pole and from then on withstood Sation's closing sprint to the wire.

Strange as It Seems

The great Babe Ruth holds more world series records than any other player, and most of them are for his hitting ability—but the same Babe Ruth was once a big league pitcher, and he showed his ability there, too, by setting two world series records, in 1916 and 1918, that still remain unbeaten.

He pitched and won the longest game in world series play in 1916, and in 1918 set another record by pitching more consecutive scoreless innings than any other series pitcher. His long game record was set October 9, 1916, when Ruth, pitching for the Boston Red Sox, won a 2-1 victory, that went 14 innings, over Sherrod Smith, Brooklyn Dodgers.

In his last game that series and in his first two games in the next series in which he played, Ruth ran up a total of 29 consecutive scoreless innings—13 in 1916 and 16 in 1918.

The United States, with all its far flung diplomatic relations with nations of the world, has ambassadors in only about one-fifth of the states and principalities of the world. There are about 75 such political divisions, of which 15 have American representation by ambassadors.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Laurel Race Track.

I was among those who gave young Jimmy Sullivan the razz on opening day at Havre de Grace. The Washington boy appeared to have ridden a mighty poor race on the favorite, Pencader. This horse has since changed stables, and I understand that it was the horse and not the rider. He made a much more auspicious debut here yesterday. Put up a pair of sizzling rides to get those last two winners home. They were his only mounts of the day. I'm beginning to like this Sullivan's work. BILL.

First race—Stand Pat tried twice to escape the maiden ranks at Havre de Grace and missed by a nose and a head. We can expect a good race from this one and the graduation seems likely. Round Table was a tip last out after some sizzling trials were recorded. Sun Abbott for the show end.

Second race—Black Target ran a whale of a race for us up the line and missed at good odds. Meets a tough pair here in Prometheus and Wise Count. May handle them at a sizable mutuel.

Third race—Cathop was only fooling in those recent races. He was a shifty sort out Chicago way. Has been conditioned and, should they decide to let this fellow run, I can see them hanging up his number. He will have Redress and Quickly to take care of.

Fourth race—Hernando takes off a chunk of weight today. Failed at the Graw, but might like this course. Looks as if Modern Times and Hillsborough will be the horses to beat. Both are reported fit and ready.

Fifth race—Fortification has the edge over this field in my book. Failed last out, but I'm going right back for more. King's Minstrel will be right with the leaders here and should be no worse than second. Off Duty for the show.

Sixth race—The ancient Stone Martin was in rare form at Havre de Grace and gets the Gate Crasher Finds Hard Going

Scribe's Tricks to Get in Without Using Ticket Old Stuff at Park.

(Editor's note—At each world's series there are always reports of "gate crashing." The Associated Press assigned the staff writer below to investigate the possibilities. Here is his story.)

By James H. Street.

POLO grounds, New York, Oct. 3.—They told me to crash the world series.

Qualifications for the assignment: The luck of the Irish, 129 pounds, five feet, four inches, overnight whiskers and an affected drawl as flat as the Delta after high water.

The result: No runs, no hits, no errors.

The pilgrimage began soon after the day was born, crisp and clear. A bustle about the Polo Grounds even then—heavy eyed overnighters, cords of frankfurters.

A reconnoiter was made, a fireman couldn't scale that fence. Then an hour's rendezvous with the hawkers.

A proposition was made to borrow a peanut seller's badge for fifteen minutes and four-bits. Three minutes later a head man hawker checked the Pilgrim's progress and took the badge. It's a racket. Neither the gypper nor the four bits could be found.

The man at the player's entrance had a look as cold as a witch's eye.

"Listen, cap'n, I've got to see Memphis Bill Terry. Hitch-hiked from Memphis to see him. 'Don't believe I'm from Memphis, huh? Ask me some questions. Ever hear of Beale street?"

"Yep, said he, "I know a song about it. Buddy's in the big leagues now and you're still a farmer. Shoo!"

A gate guard seemed sympathetic. "Hydee, mister."

He wouldn't hydee.

"Please, sir, blink your eye and let me slip through."

His eyes stayed open.

"Ticket!" It was a bellow.

"I gave it to that fellow over there."

He cut his eyes to see that fellow and the marcher ducked under a turn gate and took off.

A hand as heavy as a mortgage stopped the flight. "I ought to run you in," the law growled, "but I'm just going to kick you out."

He did. He also kicked off a patch of epidermis.

When the Pilgrim presented the proper ticket at the proper place, he heard the cop say:

"Better watch that guy."

Mrs. Fischer Ties Mrs. J. McCarthy

Mrs. A. E. Fischer, of Beaver Dam, and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, of Congressional, clicked off net scores of 81, each, yesterday at Beaver Dam to tie first prize in the annual golf battle for the Times Cup.

Mrs. Fischer had a gross of 84 for the difficult and lengthy Beaver Dam course, and a handicap of 13, while Mrs. McCarthy scored 102 and had a handicap of 21.

They will playoff for the Cup at 10 a. m., Sunday, at Beaver Dam.

Mrs. Alma Von Steiner, unattached, shot a 48—46—94, to carry off first low gross prize.

Third low net went to Mrs. J. H. Cooper, of Kenwood, with 104—21—83. Mrs. M. E. (Virginia) Irwin, of Beaver Dam, took down fourth low net prize with 97—19—83. Two other Beaver Dam women golfers also captured prizes. They were Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, with 100—16—84, and Mrs. N. J. Waldron, with 106—21—85.

A field of close to 80 competed.

Tech Dedication Game Changed

Coach Hap Hardell, of McKinley Tech, announced yesterday that the game with Episcopal, scheduled for Friday in the new Tech Stadium, had been transferred to the Episcopal field due to this city's interest in the world series. The game was to be part of the dedicatory exercises of the new playing field.

With this change, the Swavely game, originally scheduled at Manassas, Va., November 24, will be played here as the dedication game on that date.

Incidentally, this is the final game on the Tech schedule and the only game played at home. McKinley's interhigh battles will take place, as usual, in Central Stadium.

Helen Jacobs Gets Welcome at Home

Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 3 (AP).—Helen Jacobs, National tennis champion, arrived home today and her first words were for the rival she defeated by default, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody.

"Helen was perfectly justified in stopping play," Miss Jacobs said in commenting on the sudden ending to the final match at Forest Hills, N. Y. "How is she getting along?"

Mrs. Moody is undergoing treatment at her home in San Francisco for the back injury which caused her to default.

A large delegation of friends, including former University of California classmates; her mother, Mrs. Eula Jacobs, and Berkeley city officials met the champion at the station.

Miss Jacobs said she would return to New York after a few weeks' stay here. She was accompanied here by Miss Alona Friend, of Marblehead, Mass.

Odds Are Shifted to Giants As Nats Drop Opening Game

Even as it was a large afternoon for Hubbell it was a large afternoon for Ott. The first three of the Giants' runs Ott drove in with his potent bat, drove them in with slashing base hits in the first and third innings. The fourth run he scored, himself. He was there, Charlie.

Walter Stewart the Goat.

According to baseball's irrevocable law of compensation, where there must be a hero there also must be a goat. The goat today was Walter Stewart, Manager Joe Cronin's inaugural pitching choice, who was the butt of Ott's home run with a man on base in that first inning, and the butt of Ott's single in the third that sealed his departure from the box.

But Stewart also was the butt of a catastrophic error by Buddy Myer in that first inning that set the stage for the Giants' two runs and with that fact he can temper whatever grief he may be inclined to feel.

Strikes Out First Three.

Hubbell was not long in earning the respect of the Nats. No pitcher in world series history ever launched a world series effort as impressively and dramatically as Hubbell launched today's first inning. With no more apparent concern than Gandhi's Goat, he strode to the firing line at 1:30 p. m. to begin baseball's biggest job of the year.

Buddy Myer nicked two fouls off Hubbell's screwball and struck out. Goose Goslin nicked one foul ball and struck out. Heinie Manush took three strikes and struck out.

The crowd gasped. The little Washington sector of the audience abaft the Nats' dugout was aghast. Here indeed was Hubbell. Myer, Goslin and Manush all out on strikes. Right off the bat, as it were. It was unthinkable. By Gawd, the man must be good.

And he was good. He could have injected no more powerful psychological factor into the opening inning of the opening ball game. There he stood as the one figure between the Nats and overwhelming favoritism to rout the Giants in the world series. And he had taken the bit in his teeth, mowed down the peak of the Nats' hitting strength in one, two, three order in strikeouts, passed on to his teammates a flaming firebrand of Giant spirit and morale.

Strikes Out 10 Men.

Ten of the Nats he struck out before he had finished. Only Joe Cronin and Luke Sewell escaped the ravages of Hubbell's strikeout pitch. Three times Ossie Bluege went back to the bench on strikes, the last time to halt a Washington rally in the ninth inning.

Thus did Hubbell strip the Nats of their position as favorite to win the series, for the odds will surely shift with the first game, now in the keeping of the Giants.

Comes Through Unbowed.

In their behalf it must be written that the Nats went down fighting. Potential tying runs they put on base in both eighth and ninth innings. There were evident signs that Hubbell was weakening; that he was not the the ruthless master of the mound as he had been earlier in the game. But each time he came through unbowed, with colors flying.

Even as Buddy Myer's error had contributed to the Giants' two runs in the first ining, the Nats scored their first run with the help of an error by the rookie shortstop, Blondy Ryan. Into the eighth they went, still trailing by 4-1 with nary a hit to show for four innings against Hubbell.

Harris Is Walked.

And then Hubbell lapsed. Bluege struck out to start the eighth. But the first walk of the ball game, Hubbell issued to Luke Sewell. Pinch Hitter Dave Harris appeared at the plate in the stead of Jack Russell, who had relieved Stewart on the mound in the third inning and held the Giants at bay thereafter. Harris drew four straight balls and there were two on base.

Myer's Unlucky Day.

The stage was set for Buddy Myer for a complete redemption of three errors he had made, two that had no bearing on the run-scoring, but one a vital misplay that had been followed by Ott's home run. But it was Myer's unlucky day. A hard-hit grounder to Ryan, the Giant shortstop fumbled. He retrieved the ball and juggled it. Again he fumbled it, but he fumbled it into a putout at second base, for Hughie Critz had dashed over to the bag to grab the ball as it eluded Ryan's fingers. Harris, running to second, was forced for the second out of the inning.

And then Manager Bill Terry himself rescued Hubbell from further danger. Goose Goslin had rifled a whistling shot toward right field in a strong bid for a basehit when Terry, with a flourish of his gloved hand, trapped the ball in its flight to end the inning.

A moment before Goslin sent one sharp thrill through the collective shins of the little section of Washington fans. A long, hard line drive bounced from the Goose's bat toward right field. A home run. Yes, no. The ball faded away from fair territory, striking foul high on the fence. Well hit, but foul.

Came the ninth and the Nats' last gesture. An error by Ryan on Manush's hard-hit grounder halted the throngs on their way to the exits. Joe Cronin smashed a single into right field that sent Manush to second, and here were the earmarks of a rally. Fred Schulte rifled a hard smash toward third base that handcuffed Jackson—another single. Three on, none out, the tying runs on the bases.

Three On and None Out.

Here Terry strode into the box to confer with Hubbell, undeniably slipping. The Giant infielders gathered about for the parley. Terry pondered the thought of removing Hubbell from the box. In another moment his decision was made; Hubbel was to stay. The game resumed.

Joe Kuhel, the Nats' leading home run hitter, was next to bat. He struck at a Hubbell offering. The bat all but splintered in his hand. A sharp grounder to Ryan resulted. The shortstop threw Kuhel out at first, as Manush scampered over the plate with a run. Came Bluege. Hubbell struck him out for the third time this afternoon. The tenseness of the situation had eased. But a hit by Luke Sewell could still tie the game.

Bat Weakness Absent.

Two strikes Hubbell slipped past Sewell. The next pitch Sewell drove to Jackson at third base. The Giant veteran heaved it to Manager Terry at first. The ball game was over.

Outpitched, outhit and outfielded were the Nats today. The reputed weakness of the Giants' batting attack was absent. They bombarded Stewart for six hits in two innings, Russell for four hits in five innings, Al Thomas, pitching the last inning, got them out in order.

An ordinary ground ball that Myer would field in his hip pocket on any other day, set the stage for the Giants' two runs in the first. Moore's grounder rolled between Myer's legs. Critz and Terry, Stewart disposed of. But on an inside pitch to Ott, Stewart saw the ball vanish into the nearby right-field stands for a home run—a popfly home run characteristic of the Giants' park. The fence brought Goslin up sharply as he attempted to give chase to the ball.

Critz Gets Single.

But there was nothing tainted about those two runs the Giants had scored in the third. Critz singled to right field. Terry singled to right field and Ott singled to right field. One run was over. Jack Russell came in to pitch and struck out Davis. But Jackson slashed a grounder that Kuhel could only tip with his glove and though Myer and Russell turned it into a sensational putout at first base, Terry scored from third with the second run of the inning.

The Giants thus had their four runs for the day. The Nats could not match them.

Crowder to Face New York Today

afternoon in his five-inning relief shift during which he permitted the New York club only four hits and allowed no runner to advance past second base.

The Nats may have received a stunning blow to their pitching program in an injury to Russell's pitching hand that occurred when he stopped a hard liner from Ott's bat in the seventh inning. The ball struck him on the wrist and trainer Mike Martin was not optimistic that Russell would be able to pitch for at least two days.

A wee bit disappointed today was Crowder when it was definitely learned that Walter Stewart was to be sent against the Giants in the first game. Crowder, aching to pitch against the Giants, and generally recognized as the ace of Washington pitchers, was fit and ready, but bowed to the choice of Cronin.

Crowder Was Doubtful.

Cronin explained after the game that he pitched Stewart in an effort to combat the left-handed hitting strength of the Giants, and swerved from his original choice of Crowder because the latter had not been in his best form in the waning days of the pennant race. But with Russell's revelation that a right-hander could stop the Giants, Cronin did not tarry in committing himself to Crowder for the game tomorrow.

The success of the right-handed Russell against the New York sluggers may have an important bearing on the remainder of the series games, inasmuch as Cronin now may be inclined to pitch Monte Weaver ahead of the left-handed Earl Whitehill, if Crowder's performance tomorrow is corroborative of Russell's.

Series Setting Is Ideal for Cowbells

Blimps, Planes and Such Worry Fans, Players at First Game.

pursued by a great wave of hilarious home-town fans.

When one speaks of Indian summer, one conjures up mellow sunshine touching on fading green and russet brown, a pale blue sky fleeced with little wisps of windstorm cloud, and that was precisely the sort of perfect weather produced for this opening World series game.

Blimps and Autogiros.

Shadows of blimps, autogiros, and a variety of land and sea aircraft chased across the velvet green of the Polo Grounds throughout the afternoon, distracting the attention of fans and players alike and constituting, altogether, quite a nuisance. Even the umpires, solid-looking mortals in funeral black seemed to have been sky-gazing on a few occasions, to the detriment of the Washington club.

As far as the New York attendance goes, baseball appears to be a man's game, this year. Where four or five seasons ago a world series would have brought out so many of the fair sex a man could scarcely express himself on the subject of the umpiring, this throng today was almost entirely male. It was apparent that many a hoarse spectator, ankle deep in peanut shells, had told the little woman: "Dearie, you'll have to stay home, this year."

This is not to mean that there were not a few thousand fair fans sprinkled among the huge crowd, but the proportion of women was noticeably less than in previous years.

Fans Are Out Early.

The perfect weather, with just a hint of the tingle of autumn in the air, brought the fans out early today. There was talk of a sell-out long before game time, but there were plenty of vacant seats when the last straggler had arrived, and the crowd fell several thousand short of capacity.

It was some minutes after the squat Mr. Moran, umpire-in-chief, signaled to Carl Hubbell to commence, that the crowd warmed up to its rooting. These New York fans knew that in the educated left hand of this lanky pitcher reposed the fate of the Giants, and they watched the opening efforts of their hero with frank apprehension.

Heavy Roar Dies Up.

The throng was not kept in suspense long, however, and when Hubbell made Heinie Manush swing at a drifting sinker ball for the third consecutive strike-out of the first inning, a roar went up which seemed to shake the historic bluff of the Coogans.

And when Buddy Myer, who was having a most unhappy time of it all afternoon, let a spanking grounder get away from him, the New York fans settled down to some happy heckling of the noisiest variety. Mel Ott's homer in the first inning, which, to all intents and purposes put the ball game in the Hubbell frigidaire, touched off a thunder of howling. After that, these violently partisan New Yorkers settled down among their peanut shells to watch another baseball game.

Even when the pugnacious Mr. Moriarty, umpiring at first base, called Fred Schulte safe on an attempted sacrifice when the Giants' infield apparently had completed a double play, the swelling growl of rage was not particularly fraught with venom. The crowd had conceded Hubbell about an eight inning putt, and couldn't be whipped to frenzy by incidentals. The Bronx, birthplace of that species of cheer to which it gave its name, reserved its raucous expression of displeasure for some other occasion.

There were only two cowbells in evidence this afternoon, in a setting just made for cowbells, and even these hadn't the strident raspberry clamor of bitterer years. Gotham fans can be really decent sort of human beings—when going along with a winner.

Scramble for Foul Balls.

One world series pastime, however, which time seems unable to wither, is the chasing of foul balls hit into the stands. The wild scrambles on each such occasion today were well up to the sporting standards of other years. After all, if the butcher is a baseball fan, one might be able to swap a ball with Mel Ott's trade mark on it for a pound of round steak.

By the end of the third inning, and until the Nats started their sporadic drive in the eighth, the excitement had pretty well gone out of the afternoon's fun. Aside from those fans who inevitably whistle shrilly by way of self-expression there wasn't much noise in the big horseshoe-shaped stands for several innings.

Mel Ott, whose batting won the ball game, had his own particular fans out in the right field pavilion, who applauded his return to his position each inning. The rest of the crowd had settled down to personalities, including such rare humor as emitting a long drawn out "G-o-o-o-o-o-s-e" when Goslin lumbered up to bat.

In the eighth inning with hundreds of fans streaming towards the exits "Goose" nearly made his tormentors swallow their unmelodious outcry.

With one out, Sewell had drawn a walk, the first permitted by Hubbell, bringing up Dave Harris in the role of pinch hitter for Russell. Dave also was passed, but was forced at second by Buddy Myer on a play in which Blondy Ryan combined the most ludicrous features of a drop-kick and forward pass, yet got his man. The sheriff might have beaten Ryan's dizzy toss to second if he hadn't stopped to look around for his bloodhounds about half way down the base line.

Foul Line Involved.

It was at this stage that the "Goose" took hold of one of Hubbell's famous screwballs and straightened it out in the general direction of the right field pavilion. But the ball fell foul by a few feet, the bright white foul line seeming, to the anguished gaze of the Washington adherents, to reach right over and insert itself into the picture. And then the New Yorkers found their voices again as Manager Bill Terry went into the air gracefully and efficiently to spear a somewhat similar smash from Goslin's bat and end the inning.

The Nats' bid in the ninth was far from anticlimatic, and kept their faithful followers on the edge of their seats, rooting and praying until Hubbell bore down and put an end to New York's anxiety.

With this initial victory in hand, the Giants undoubtedly will find their ball park filled tomorrow. New York fans are that way.

Battle Nears For $1,000,000 In Pitts Case

U. S. Seeks Collection of Back Income Tax Payments.

A showdown is expected November 15 in the Government's battle to collect more than $1,000,000 in back income taxes and penalties from G. Bryan Pitts, former chairman of the board of the F. H. Smith Co.

Pitts is directing the fight to save his fortune from a cell in Lorton Reformatory, where he is serving a 14-year sentence for conviction of conspiracy to embezzle $5,000,000 and an additional term of a year and a day drawn for contempt of court.

His wife, Mrs. Gladys T. Pitts, has been named joint defendant She will appear when the case is heard by the Board of Tax Appeals.

Meanwhile, William Warfield Ross, Smith company attorney, declared the $500,000 Spanish villa, in Palm Beach, Fla., where Mr. and Mrs. Pitts formerly entertained, was damaged in recent storms.

House Needs Repair.

"I am advised by the Florida internal revenue collector," Mr. Ross said, "that the house must be repaired to save its valuable antique furniture.

He said he notified the collector because the Government should assume responsibility, as it seized the property to protect income tax claims.

The Government in 1930 filed claims against Mr. and Mrs. Pitts totaling $2,020,453.02. The Post learned, however, that income attorneys have revised their demands and are not likely to insist upon payment of more than $1,250,000.

Internal Revenue investigators attended Pitts' embezzlement trial when the financier told of spending thousands of dollars buying custom-built automobiles, jewels, furs and other luxuries.

Seized Property.

Income tax attorneys later seized property in five States and the District owned by the couple. The actions were brought by collectors in the District, Maryland, Wisconsin, New York, Delaware and Florida.

Mrs. Pitts, Henry O. Hart, confidential agent of Pitts, and their chauffeur, Patrick J. Clancy, were arrested a year ago in Atlantic City on charges of concealing asets.

At that time the Government exercised liens on $500,000 worth of Mrs. Pitts jewelry and $189,000 in bonds held by Hart.

Richard L. Merrick, counsel for Pitts, is said to plan a move to obtain reduction in the claims. There also is a possibility he will stipulate an agreed set of facts and seek a settlement out of court.

The tax board has under consideration a request by Ross that he be permitted to introduce testimony to show that Smith Co. funds, fraudulently obtained, were used by Pitts to purchase the Florida villa.

D. C. Man Kills Self In Hotel at Richmond

Clarence M. Danforth, 45, of 1441 Harvard street northwest, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself in the head in a hotel room in Richmond, Va.

Danforth, according to Washington police, was arrested here last Thursday on a nonsupport charge filed by his wife. He was free on $500 bond. Mrs. Danforth, 2007 I street northwest, is an employe of the Y. W. C. A.

Drug Store Burglars Grab Smokes, Sweets

Cigars, cigarets, candy, extracts, perfumes and clocks made up the loot of burglars who broke into a drug store early yesterday at 3145 Mount Pleasant street northwest. Isador Sacks, proprietor, told police the merchandise was valued at $75.

Nail Utilized to "Hook" Clothing Through Bars

Using a long stick with a nail in the end of it, thieves yesterday "hooked" $25 worth of clothing from the shop of Herman Schley, 1739 F street northwest.

Schley told police that bars over a skylight kept the thieves from entering the shop.

Baby Deer Takes to Bottle

Because zoo officials feared its too-affectionate mother would injure it, this recently born spotted Indian deer is now a bottle baby. It consumes two pints of milk a day with assistance of its keeper.

New Zoo Gnu Hurt in Dash Out of Crate

Crashes Into Tree, Spine Possibly Broken; Mate Uninjured.

A frenzied dash from the crate in which it was shipped to the Washington Zoo may cost the life of a male white-tailed gnu.

The animal, one of several received at the Zoo yesterday, apparently blinded by the sunlight, ran headlong against a tree.

It could not rise. Keepers carried it to a bed of straw. Dr. William M. Mann said the gnu's spine was either broken or at least severely injured.

The beast's companion, a female, was released without injury.

In the same consignment of animals were a female eland and three Molucca deer. The eland will be mated with a male whose former mate died last winter when a calf was born.

Nondirecting Director Now Banned, Says Bane

One effect of the National Securities Act will be elimination of directors from boards who allow the use of their names without taking an active interest in company affairs, according to B. B. Bane, of the Federal Trade Commission.

He voiced the view in an address yesterday to the Washington Civitan Club.

Warm winters are universal except in the area around the Mediterrean Sea, where the trend is downward, he declared.

Nats, Beaten 6-1, Return to Show Before President

Cronin Men Grim and Defiant Despite Loss of 2 Straight.

Players Cheered At Union Station

Al Crowder Pounded Out Yesterday by 6-Run Rally of Giants.

By Shirley Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

The world series moves its trappings to Washington today where the Nats, who limped back from New York last night nursing the wounds of two defeats, resume their baseball death struggle with the Giants before Presidential pomp and dignity.

Graced by the presence of President Roosevelt, Postmaster General James A. Farley, and other members of the Cabinet who have reserved a box seat section at Griffith Stadium, the series shifts from the sidewalks of New York to the shadow of the Capitol; from a la carte to table d'hote, as it were.

Greeted by throngs at Union Station last night like conquering heroes rather than like beaten favorites, the Nats were grim, defiant, despite their 6-to-1 defeat of yesterday.

Goslin Slams Homer.

A home run by Goose Goslin that skyrocketed into the upper tier of the right-field bleachers loomed large and luminous, lighting the way to victory for Washington, in the second game of the world this afternoon or five full innings yesterday—and then the Nats were disillusioned.

Came the sixth inning and the release of the floodgates by Al Crowder. Six Giant runs cascaded across the plate; six death-dealing runs swept away Washington's 1-0 lead that had sputtered but had refused to die; six swift, sudden runs buried the Nats under a 6-1 score, and the second game of the series passed into the keeping of the New York club.

Have Strangle Hold.

With bats belching base hits—eight of them—in a sustained barrage in that sixth inning, the Giants laid waste to the offerings of Crowder and planted the standard of the National League in a commanding position atop the world series situation. This morning the Giants have a strangle hold on the championship.

With bludgeon and with rapier, with clout and with bunt the Giants in that sixth inning struck to hew away the Nats' lead and convey to the Washington club that here was a foe that was relentless, dangerous and mighty. It is a heavy National League tone that now decorates the world series battlefield.

Many Stay Away.

Fewer than 40,000 were in the Polo Grounds to witness the complete eclipse of the Nats by the Giants yesterday, as New York, with that queer New York crowd psychology, stayed away in great numbers from a ball game that found

U. S. Demands Brokers' Data In Income Quiz

Accounts of Customers Will Be Scanned in Sweeping Drive.

Cooperation of brokerage houses in a nation-wide drive against fraudulent income tax returns has been asked by the Treasury's Internal Revenue division in expectation of an order to brokers to furnish information concerning customers' accounts.

The companys' will be directed chiefly against tax payers who have made enormous reports of sales of securities so as to establish losses.

"There will be no prosecution of any person who, under a misapprehension filed an inaccurate return," Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering said last night.

Will Issue Order Soon.

There are instances, he said, where individuals have sold securities to their secretaries or relatives, who were not in position to buy in the amounts involved, and subsequently have repurchased the securities without a bona fide sale having been made.

The inquiry will be directed chiefly to returns made for the years 1929 to 1932. Commissioner Helvering expects to issue an order soon to all brokers requiring information relative to the accounts of each customer.

Letters were addressed yesterday to brokerage houses in New York informing them of the commissioner's pending order, so they could begin preparation of the required data. None has been sent to local brokers.

Information Sought.

In general, the inforamtion to be required by the commissioner's order calls for the name and address of the customer and the amount of his debit or credit balance at the close of each year.

This is the first time detailed information concerning private transactions of brokers' clients has been requested.

Exchange Comes as Pool Profits of Dillon Bankers Shown.

11 Partners Sold Stock Costing $14,809 for $4,000,000.

Pool operations with large profits yesterday held attention of the Senate Banking Committee at hearings enlivened by frequent clashes between Senator Glass, (Democrat), Virginia, and Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel.

Witnesses told how 11 Dillon, Read & Co. officials, through a pool managed by Dominick & Dominick, sold for $4,000,000 in the open market, shares originally costing $14,809. The pool was in stock of the United States & Foreign Securities Corporation, organized by Dillon, Read & Co.

Robert E. Christie, jr., a partner of the firm, and president nominee of the Investment Bankers Association, detailed how individual partners disposed of 74,198 shares of their stock through Dominick & Dominick.

Morgan Clashes Recalled.

It was when Christie, hard pressed by Pecora, sought advice of associates that Senator Glass and Pecora renewed heated interchanges reminiscent of those that marked the J. P. Morgan & Co. inquiry last spring.

Pecora told Christie he wanted information based on his own knowledge.

"You don't hesitate to consult your associates, and the witness has a right to consult his," Senator Glass broke in.

"The situation isn't analagous," Pecora shot back.

As Christie began to answer, Glass advised him:

"Get all of the information from your associates you want; I insist upon that."

Glass Wants Information.

The second clash came when Pecora hinted existence of a pool in the United States & Foreign Securities Corp. stock. Pointing to a Senate resolution requiring counsel to advise the committee on the line of questioning he will take, Glass complained he did not know what Pecora was trying to prove.

Chairman Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, said Pecora outlined his plans at an executive committee

Arms Action To Be Hurried

Rumors of Parley Failure Stirs U. S. and Other Delegations.

Geneva, Oct. 4 (AP).—The steering committee of the world disarmament conference was officially called today by Arthur Henderson, chairman of the assemblage, to meet in private session Monday afternoon.

It was understood that several delegations, including the American, had forced this action in view of persistent rumors that attempts would be made to declare the Geneva parley a potential failure.

A delegation of one of the great powers said tonight disarmament was hovering on the rocks. Belief was based on the fact that Germany and the other great powers, including the United States, had not reached a common understanding.

A German spokesman said the Reich would reveal its position when the conference resumes October 14 to consider the British disarmament plan.

Members of some delegations said they felt it useless to resume the conference unless a political settlement was reached.

'Pig-Killing, Milk-Dumping' Program Assailed by Long

New Orleans, La., Oct. 4 (U.P.). Senator Huey P. Long today got his long-awaited chance to speak his mind about the patronage business in Louisiana, and the "hog-murdering, milk-dumping, cotton-killing" program of the administration in Washington.

It was a telegram to Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board.

Wagner informed Long President Roosevelt had ordered the National Labor Board to set up arbitration and mediation boards in every State. He asked Senator Long to suggest names of New Orleans men for appointment.

This was the last straw for Huey. He sat down and framed his reply.

The Kingfish refused to make recommendations because "President Roosevelt had used all the recommendations that I have ever made in the past for purpose of giving out publicity of how I have been given a back seat through his administration." He said:

"If I submitted any names, it would most certainly follow that something would be said in the papers that I had undertaken to put myself in line with the outlandish performances of the administration out in this part of the country.

"Murdering hogs, pouring milk in the river, plowing up cotton, when people are crying for food and clothes, is something my mind can not comprehend anyway, so I just must be constitutionally unable to play the part required of me," Long said.

Secretary Addresses Labor Parley

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is shown above as she spoke yesterday at the fifty-third annual convention of the American Federation of Labor at the Willard Hotel.

Miss Perkins Backs Labor's Wage Demands

Her Promise to Help Fight Battles Wins Leaders Who Opposed Her.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins yesterday threw her support behind the fight of organized labor to obtain shorter hours and higher wages than those in existing NRA codes.

"We can not stop with the present minimum wages and maximum hours of labor," Miss Perkins said in a speech to the 577 delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention at the Willard Hotel.

"We must go on with a unified purpose to an ever-improving standard of living and assurance of economic security for all our people and sufficient leisure to enable us to enjoy the blessings which our resources and our equipment can make available to all of us," she added.

Workers Must Prosper.

There can be no prosperity without a prosperous working class, she said, adding that the workers can not be prosperous unless "industry recognizes that workers must receive increased wages and shorter hours in fair proportion as profits increase."

The response of the A. F. of L. to the speech of a woman, whose appointment to the Cabinet it had opposed, was startling. Delegates gave her an ovation.

President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, declared the speech was "inspirational," that it made her an ally of the organization in its fight for more fruits of the NRA program.

President William Green, of the federation, who led opposition to her appointment, asserted "we are heartened and inspired by her noble address."

"I want to assure her with all the sincerity at my command," he added, "that this great American labor movement will give her full and unreserved support. And if she gets into a fight with anyone who tries to hamper her work, let her call upon us, and we shall send millions to aid her."

Denounces Works Delay.

Prior to the speech, in which she aligned herself with the labor program, there had been excitement when eight national and international unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. had joined in denouncing the manner in which the $3,300,000,000 public works program has been administered.

Public Works Administrator Ickes has said those to blame for the drag of public works expenditures are State and local authorities. However, the eight unions asked the convention to press President Roosevelt to remove public officials who,

American Faces 7 Years, 15 Lashes

Canada Sentences Man for Bank Robbery.

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 4 (AP).—A seven-year sentence, with 15 lashes, was meted out today to Marion Fauria, arrested in Florida, charged with robbing the Royal Bank of Canada last November.

"Let this be a warning to American gunmen they can not come over to Canada," the judge said, in passing sentence.

Approximately $2,050 was obtained in the hold-up.

Fauria was charged with attempting to break jail while awaiting trial. He was given seven years for the robbery and an additional six months, beside the lashes, for the attempted jail break.

District Relief Head Will Ask For $750,000

Growing Needs to Require More Cash by March; 17,000 on Rolls.

Approximately $750,000 will be needed to meet growing demands of Washington needy when funds now available are exhausted in March, Lerony A. Halbert, District Emergency Relief Division director, divulged yesterday.

Halbert predicted Congress would be asked to set aside $500,000 from District funds for the work in a deficiency bill. He said it is likely the Federal Emergency Relief Administration would be asked to appropriate the additional $250,000.

About 17,000 persons, a majority of them unemployed, Halbert said, are on local relief rolls. The cost of caring for them has been approximating $80,000 a week. Slightly more than a third of all funds spent this year have been received from Federal sources and the remainder from the District.

Hard to Estimate Needs.

"It is hard, of course," Halbert explained, "to estimate our needs for the future. Much depends on economic conditions. We always have a seasonal increase in calls for help in the winter, but that may be offset by better times.

"We had to get two deficiency appropriations last year. All indications are we will have to get at least one this winter, because we can't let anyone starve."

Halbert announced the first shipment of 190,000 pounds of pork alloted to the District by the Federal Government is due next week. Consisting of 50,000 pounds, the meat will be distributed by trucks from the abandoned fire station house of Truck Co. No. 3 on Fourteenth street.

The pork will be shared by 10,000 families, each receiving five pounds. Halbert expects the first shipment will be exhausted in two weeks. Other meat will be requested as needed. Persons who have religious scruples against eating pork will receive orders for other food.

Chest Policy Changed.

Meanwhile, a radical change in Community Chest policy was indicated by Elwood Street, Chest director, who said his organization, in its drive for funds, will concentrate on caring for the financial needs of welfare, charitable and character building organizations instead of those interested in unemployment relief.

Street disclosed the goal in the November drive probably would be around $1,950,000.

Halbert said $1,300,000 in District funds for the fiscal year beginning July 1, last, and large Federal grants, originally expected to last until next July, are getting low. He said Federal grants for January, February and March totaled $140,767; for April, May and June, $173,353, and for July, August and September, tentative, $250,926.

President Starts Washington Trip

Broadway Throng Cheers Him on Way to Train.

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 5 (Thursday) (AP).—President Roosevelt left on a special train for Washington shortly after midnight today.

The President's party was joined by Henry Bruere, New York banker, who is expected to become the coordinator of Mr. Roosevelt's rapidly formulating credit expansion program.

Passing across Manhattan, the President's car encountered the after-theater crowds on Times Square and lusty cheers rose.

U.S. Asks Bids On 844,525 Tons of Rails

Government Will Lend 47 Lines $25,000,000 to Purchase Steel.

Carriers to Need Total of 1,089,746 Tons, Eastman Told.

(Associated Press.)

The administration yesterday asked four steel companies to submit bids on 844,525 tons of steel rails for 47 railroads.

Later, bids will be asked of a large number of companies on 245,221 tons of steel fastenings for rails after they are laid.

The railroads informed Joseph B. Eastman, coordinator of transportation, they would need a total of 1,089,746 tons of steel. The administration plan is to lend the carriers $25,000,000 or more from public works funds with which to make the purchases.

Steel Code Suspended.

To carry out the plan, which would supply work for men in steel mills and on the railroads, the steel code was suspended so the companies might compete. After the bids are in they will be made public, and the lowest will be taken as the base price at which the steel will be purchased. The bids are for rails of 60 pounds per yard or over.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, which needs 100,000 tons of rails and 30,000 tons of fastenings, told the coordinator it will place its own orders and did not ask a price reduction. Some railroads are seeking a reduction from the present base price of $40 a ton, while others contemplating important orders stipulated the price shall not exceed $35 a ton.

Needs of the carriers were made known today when Eastman gave out a letter he wrote to Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation; L. E. Block, chairman of the Inland Steel Co., and Arthur Roeder, receiver for the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

These four steel concerns are the only ones manufacturing rails of 60 pounds per yard or over. The most important bids will be on rails of 112 and 131 pound weights.

Wait on Fastenings.

"At the present time," Eastman wrote the steel men, "I am not asking for prices on fastenings, because it is my understanding that whereas only the four companies

German Press Gag Approved

Editors Will Be Subject to Discipline by Court.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Berlin, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The cabinet tonight approved the first section of the press law submitted by Propaganda Minister Goebbels.

The press law affects all editors. It states that the press is "a public institution." Thus, the law is the exact opposite of the former conception of the absolute freedom of the press.

The law in many ways resembles the Italian Fascist press law. It provides for registration of all newspapermen, aiming at their supervision.

It stipulates that editors must be of Aryan descent (non-Jewish). All editors must share in the Nazi conception of the present state.

It is provided that editors must be German citizens.

Editors are far more responsible to the state authorities than heretofore. Their responsibility is defined as equal to that of civil servants, and they may be liable to disciplinary action by a press court—to be created—which may decide on an editor's absolute exclusion from the profession.

Four Killed During Looting In Hurricane-Swept Havana

Havana, Oct. 4 (AP).—Four persons met death tonight as looting broke out along the water front section of uptown Havana during the height of the second phase of a tropical storm which lashed over the city.

There was wild firing when soldiers, sailors and members of the Caribbean army sought to disperse groups of hoodlums. A soldier was fatally wounded, a sailor and two Negroes were killed.

Assembling of groups was forbidden. Army headquarters announced all available soldiers and sailors had been posted in the center of the city under strict orders to kill looters and suspicious-looking persons.

Along the water front drive water was 3 feet deep with waves dashing over the seawalls.

National Observatory predicted gales would sweep Havana throughout the night. Belen Observatory reported a maximum wind velocity of 82 miles.

Those wounded during the street fighting were taken to an emergency hospital which, like much of the rest of the city, was without light. Physicians were unable to operate immediately.

Observatory reports indicated the new course of the storm might endanger Key West and Southern Florida.

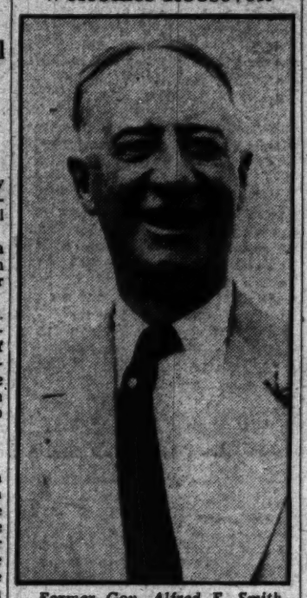
Schwab Quits Hospital Recovered After Rest

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Charles M. Schwab, steel executive, was discharged today from Doctors' Hospital, where he had gone for a rest.

A. J. Gertenback, resident manager, said Schwab apparently was fully recovered from exhaustion.

Roosevelt Asks Sterner Battle To Feed Needy

Welcomes Roosevelt



Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who slapped the President on the back as he crossed the platform to make an address at the banquet of the Catholic Charities in New York last night.

"Harder Part Ahead," He Informs Catholic Charity Parley.

Greeted by Smith With Slap on Back

O'Brien and Curry Sit Nearby, But New York Row Is Forgotten.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Before the National Conference of Catholic Charities, President Roosevelt tonight praised the Nation for its relief efforts and called State, city, church and private institutions to redouble efforts for the "harder part ahead."

The President, who received a cheering reception was applauded heartily by the crowd in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel as he asserted:

"We have ventured and we have won; we shall venture further and we shall win again."

Mr. Roosevelt was surrounded on the platform by high church dignitaries and prominent men of New York City including Alfred E. Smith and Mayor John P. O'Brien.

Greeted By Smith.

Mr. Smith slapped the President on his shoulder as the latter passed him walking to his seat. Smiling, Mr. Roosevelt whispered in Smith's ear as he passed.

The President was interrupted with lusty applause as he remarked:

"Leadership I have tried to give, but the great and most important fact has been the response—the wholehearted response—of America."

Cardinal Hayes, who sat beside the President, made a brief address.

The President appeared the picture of health. His face still retained the bronze burnt on his countenance on fishing and vacation cruises.

President at Banquet.

The President and his party entered the hall nearly two hours before he delivered his address.

Mr. Roosevelt was escorted by his military aid, Col. Edwin Watson. On the arm of Cardinal Hayes was Mrs. Roosevelt. The cardinal, in robes of rich red, sat between them at the banquet.

As the party neared the dais, Mr. Smith—a portly figure with a large cigar—stepped forward.

"How are you, Frank?"

"Fine, Al," the President returned a slap on the shoulder.

The banquet provided a study in New York politics. In the center was the President, who has declared, a White House announcement recently said, a "hands off" policy in the mayoralty election. Nearby were Mayor O'Brien and John F. Curry, Tammany leader.

Farley Among Guests.

To the President's left was Postmaster General Farley who, it has been reported, lends his influence to the campagin of Joseph McKee, as an independent, over O'Brien. Further on was Smith.

But tonight, as the President appealed to churches and communities to give full share in the burden of jobless relief, politics was forgotten.

This was the last night of his final summer outing. After the banquet, he returned to Washington for the NRA's winter drive.

The expected discussion on currency was not forthcoming. Instead, the President stressed the spiritual side of the National life.

A long roar swelled over the banquet hall as he declared:

"Always have I been certain that we would conquer, because the spirit of America springs from faith—faith in the beloved institutions of our land and a true and abiding faith in the divine guidance of God."

Cardinal Hits Selfishness.

Cardinal Hayes, like the President, said the country must be reconstruced on a new basis. The old order, he said, was "built upon a foundation of selfishness, unrestricted competition, and a craving for economic power."

"Our able bodied citizens should be assured of a family wage," he continued, "decent hours, safe working conditions and steady work. No one can assert that they are beyond the resources of the land if properly managed.

"The days that face us are days of uncertainty, of change, but, nevertheless, days of hope."

Legion Seeks Full Benefits For Disabled

Bonus Move Apparently Suppressed by Action of Committee.

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—The American Legion had before it tonight a plan of veterans' relief that concentrated on "full benefits" for the disabled and disregarded demands for immediate payment of the bonus.

The bonus matter was disposed of with apparent finality when a legislative committee turned down resolutions from six States — Illinois, Missouri, South Dakota, Texas, Michigan and Pennsylvania — urging immediate payment.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, leader in the movement, appeared satisfied to drop the matter after the committee adopted a resolution urging cancellation of interest on loans already made by veterans against their adjusted compensation certificates.

Five-Point Plan Ready.

Passed unanimously by the Legion's rehabilitation committee, a five-point program for aiding ex-service men will be placed before the convention tomorrow.

Except for declaring every former service man entitled to Federal hospitalization at any time and for any cause, the program deals only with those veterans whose ailments date back to injuries suffered or diseases contracted during actual military service.

No provision is made for compensation payments to veterans beset by illness, injuries or economic troubles since the end of the war. Free hospitalization would be the only Government grant to them.

Restore All Benefits.

However, for those wounded, injured or diseased in military service, the plan would restore all benefits removed or reduced under the economy act of last March, which trimmed $300,000,000 a year from such payments. Widows and orphans likewise would be provided for as they were prior to the economy act.

The legionnaires today adopted a child welfare program, selected Miami, Fla., for the 1934 convention and adopted more rigid regulations forbidding legion officials to take part in politics.
